*Huerta Troops Win Victory Over State
Forces in Desperate Battle at Naco; May Be Renewed*

EL PASO, Tex., March 15.—The strictest enforcement of neutrality yet experienced along the border is in effect today. All Mexican soldiers, federal or insurgent, armed or unarmed, in uniform or civilian dress, may be arrested if they step on United States soil.

This order was received today by commanders of United States troops along the Mexican frontier. It came from General T. H. Bliss, commanding the southern department, from San Antonio, Tex. On previous occasions such an order has applied only to rebels, but never before to all Mexican soldiers.

To avoid friction, the order was communicated today to Colonel Juan N. Alasquez, commanding the federal garrison at Juarez so that he might warn all of his officers not to visit El Paso, just over the line. Rebels and federales like have been treated literally in the American border towns where they make their purchases and are not arrested unless armed.

Huerta Soldiers Victorious.

NACO, Ariz., March 15.—Instead of failing to be attacked by nearly 1,000 insurgent state troops, General Ojeda, with less than 500 federal soldiers sent our today from Naco, met and defeated the enemy. In three hours of aggressive fighting, repelling the enemy's line with rifle and machine gun bullets, and spraying lead from shrapnel shells over hills adopted as fortifications, the Huerta federales drove the state forces five miles to the southeast. Late today the government forces returned victorious to the Mexican border towns and customs port opposite this point.

But even the victory did not believe the fighting was ended, nor that Naco is secure from assault. The state forces are assembling tonight in still greater numbers to wrest the only remaining port on the Sonora border from the hands of the Huerta national government. With the advantage of unexpected aggression, and possessing five artillery pieces, the little brown, barefooted soldiers defending the military honor of the new Huerta regime fought as wild men against, seemingly, overwhelming odds. Protected by the artillery fire over their heads, the federales scrambled over the hillsides and gallantly cracked their rifles at the heads of the enemy appearing on the crests of the rolling country along the border.

Fighting Was Desperate.

It was the group under Elias Galles which first received the assault. Exuding to attack rather than to be attacked, the state troops soon fell back the other half of the constitutional forces under Prefecto Breameante rushed to the rescue from the east and with a roar of artillery and the continued rattle of muskets the battle was on. For an hour desperate fighting continued. But little by little the state troops fell back, from the biting fire of the aggressors. For a full mile the Huerta soldiers pursued closely the retreating enemy, advancing the artillery from the rear of the skirmishes. Bodies of killed and wounded state troops lay together deserted on the field.

FAMILY OF 6 PERISH IN SEVERE BLIZZARD

Found Dead on Bleak Prairies of South Dakota Where Overcome by Storm

RAPID CITY, S. D., March 15.—A. N. Perry, his wife, three daughters and son were found frozen to death, by Box Elder Divide, 16 miles east of here, today. Leslie Perry, 10 years old, another son, was picked up delirious by the party by W. E. Gearen of St. Paul. Brought to this city, he talked incompletely of searching for his parents since early Friday morning when told they were dead, he fainted and is in the hospital. His face, hands and feet are frozen.

Perry, who was the postmaster at Big Bend, left here Thursday afternoon with his family and household goods loaded in four wagons attempting in the face of a blizzard to reach a ranch he had leased.

The first intimation of their fate came today when a party of horses with gunny sacks over their heads and traces dragging wandered into the corral of Milton Freaze's ranch. The trail of the horses led searchers to a wagon half buried in snow. In the wagon Perry's four children and Mrs. Perry were found. The father lay on the ground, his feet in the wagon spokes, as though he had fallen while climbing into the wagon after releasing the horses.

Five other of Perry's children with the other wagons were found at Corral ranch. Leslie Perry had turned back from this party to bring his parents home.

On behalf of the state of Arizona, Sheriff H. C. Wheeler of Tombstone,

Hats for Easter Hats for Spring

Marvelous from the standpoint of serviceability, for every hat in the vast display is the sort that somebody in this city wants to wear this spring. No show pieces, still every one has been chosen with such rare taste that you'll be charmed with the beauty and loveliness of them all—and charmed, too, with the prices that prevail here—for it's characteristic of this store to always offer greatest values—which simply means the merchandise most in demand at a lower price than elsewhere.

Pattern hats brilliant with unexpected colors, and so small in shape that they are creating a sensation. A complete transformation in fashions—the whim of Paris. The trimmings are narrow ribbons, small roses and flowers, and feathers which shoot straight up or straight out in back. The fashion of the hour, and beautiful and becoming, still they are very simple.

Saucy new spring hats of course small of hemp and fine straws, with soft and fluffy ostrich ornaments, velvet ribbons and flowers sticking up straight. A charming collection indeed and priced extremely low.

Hats priced within the reach of all. $3.75 to $25. We specialize on trimmed hats at $5. See the beauties at that price.

Special at 75c yard.

Handsome little hats, copies and modified copies of French hats most all are small, including the new tam crowns, the aeroplane hat, the swathed hat of Maline and scores of fashionable, close-fitting shapes of Tagal, hair and fancy straws. REPUBLICANS DELAY WILSON APPOINTMENTS

WASHINGTON, March 15.—Republican objections to hasty action on President Wilson's appointments again today delayed action in the confirmation of several important nominations, including those of Dr. R. T. Galloway to be assistant secretary of agriculture; John S. Williams to be assistant secretary of the treasury; Edwin F. Sweet to be assistant secretary of commerce, and Franklin D. Roosevelt to be assistant secretary of the navy.

Democratic chairman newly chosen were ready to poll their committees as to the approval of the appointments but Senators Root and Jones insisted that regular committee meetings be held.

Senator Smith of Georgia, the new chairman of the committee on education and labor, made arrangements today for a meeting of his committee to consider the protests that have been made against the reappointment of Dr. Charles P. Neill as commissioner of labor statistics. It is expected the senate will act Monday on several of the pending appointments.

150 INSANE WOMEN IMPERILED BY FIRE

PEORIA, Ill., March 16 (Sunday).—Another fire scare, the second within two weeks, was experienced at the Illinois State Hospital for the Insane at Barierville at 12:40 this morning when a nurse discovered flames eating their way between the first floor and the ceiling of the basement in Cottage 5-C, in which 150 female patients are quartered.

When the fire department arrived the building was filled with smoke. Work of removing the inmates was under way when stopped by Superintendent George Zeller, who found the fire could be easily controlled. The flames were quickly extinguished. Some of the inmates suffered from smoke but none were overcome.

A negro patient is blamed for the fire. Rags and papers had been packed between the floors and then lighted. The monetary loss is small.

SHOW GIRLS ASSERT WAGES ARE AMPLE

Have No Complaint Against Employers. Go on Stage to Develop Talent

PEORIA, Ill., March 15.—Miss Jane Fullerton, who acts "in stock," told the Illinois vice commission about life on the stage here this afternoon. The women employees of two shows playing here had been subpoenaed, but there was time only to hear Miss Fullerton.

She gave the average minimum wage of chorus girls at $16. Those who "read lines," she said, rarely received less than $25 a week.

"Reading lines," she explained, means speaking parts. The average salary of actors and actresses "reading lines" runs from $25 to $70 a week, she said. There were stars who receive salaries running into the hundreds and thousands.

"Do you know anything of stage people of both sexes being obliged to dress in the same dressing room?" Lieutenant Governor O'Hara, chairman of the committee, asked.

"Never heard of such a thing. In this city my dressing room has a large mirror and room for two big trunks. In some houses there is less room, and two women may be put together, never of different sex, however."

Why They Go on Stage.

Chairman O'Hara has asked a great many women since the commission was instituted whether they were driven to the downward path by low wages. He asked Miss Fullerton whether women were ever driven to the stage by inadequate pay received in other branches of endeavor.

"Oh, no; most girls go on the stage because they are ambitious," she replied. "They feel that they have talent."

The commission worked fast, and during the day quizzed 18 witnesses, including merchants, manufacturers, girls of the underworld and proprietors of resorts.

The eastern trip of the commission depends on whether the senatorial deadlock is broken before Thursday. If it is broken by that time, the commissioners will visit a number of eastern cities, but if it is not, the commission will respond to an invitation from President Wilson and make a flying trip to Washington on Thursday to discuss the vice crusade, returning to Springfield immediately to attend sessions of the legislature, deferring visits to other eastern cities.

Business Men Called.

Thomas Greer, manager of a department store, did not know the profits of his firm, but was sure that the firm could not pay a minimum wage of $25 to its women employees without seriously interfering with the earnings of the house.

P. A. Berger, head of a department store, stated his belief that low wages have little to do with immorality among women.

He expressed the opinion that a minimum wage scale for women would be disastrous. In the first place, firms would hire only persons who were worth the money, he asserted, and unskilled persons, instead of getting $25 or $35 while learning, as at present, would not be hired at all. He thought such a law would throw more women on the street than under the present system.

H. P. Given, a cloak and suit retailer, paid a minimum of $6 a week. "If they are not worth $6 they are not worth hiring," he said.

Store as Training School.

W. D. Roos, a 5-and-10-cent store man, paid low wages because the girls he employed regard his store as a mere training school in salesmanship. They generally leave him as soon as they grasp the rudiments of salesmanship, he said.

The women of the town who were examined invariably included low wages among the reasons for immorality, but did not believe this was the sole cause. One woman said that the main cause was the craving of girls for companionship. This craving left them open to the temptations of the world, she said. Another reason was unhappiness at home.

"In our life they find companionship at least," she said. "I would say that nine out of 10 girls fall because they are lonely. At home, when the home is poor, as it usually is, their wages are taken from them. They cannot dress to go among others. They are hopeless in the humdrum life, and our life to them seems to offer a way out."

QUIETUS NOW PUT ON NEW COUNTY INDUSTRY

DENVER, March 15.—What members hope is the final quietus was put on the new county industry in the house this morning. The bill for Divide and Sunshine counties were killed, and the bill providing for a vote of all future county divisions was carried unanimously on third reading, and now goes to the senate for concurrence.

The Sunshine and Divide county bills were killed when the house accepted the adverse report of the committee on county division. There was no debate on Sunshine county, divisions showing 24 for the bill and 27 against it.

Representative Vogt, however, made a hard fight for Divide county, charging that the Colorado Springs Chamber of Commerce had secured signatures to the petitions protesting against the new county by deceit.

Mrs. Riddle led the fight against Divide county, protesting that Elbert county is now only a fifth-class county, and that the people cannot stand the increase of taxes that would be caused by division. Vogt's Bryan county bill would slice off another section of Elbert county, she said, and about all that would be left of the present county would be the court house.

Representatives Persons and Thom as also argued against the bill. When the vote was taken only six members were found to be in favor of the measure.

MRS. CLARKSON TO MEET HUBBY TODAY

CHICAGO, March 15.—A meeting between Rev. Nestor S. Clarkson and his wife, who ran away from her husband and five children with Owen Dale Conn, probably will take place tomorrow. Mrs. Clarkson arrived in Chicago today from Milwaukee, but her husband did not meet her at the railroad station as she had expected.

Soon after her arrival, however, he sent her a message, saying he could not see her today, but would meet her tomorrow.

Friends of Mrs. Clarkson have invited her to come to their home and stay as long as she likes.

"I suppose I'll be scolded and prayed over," she said in regard to her possible relation to the band of mission workers of which her husband is the leader, "but I'll be safe anyhow."

Worn out by her troubles and the hardships which the condition of destitution in which she has been living since she and Conn separated, Mrs. Clarkson was overwhelmed by disappointment when a hurried scanning of faces at the Northwestern depot on her arrival failed to show her husband in the throng. The shock was so great that it was feared the woman would collapse. She had been informed that her husband and the couple's five children would be on hand to receive her at the station.

Blames Husband.

Mrs. Clarkson attributed her leaving her husband to the strictness of conduct which he required from her and the children. Though she was a missionary and loved the work, even designing the uniforms which his subordinate workers wore, she said she loved to see "real life."

"Why, once I took the children to a picture show—and Mr. Clarkson raved about it," she said.

Her acquaintance with Conn began while she was a mission worker visiting the prisons and grew into friendship through her meeting his sister and his declared intention to reform.

"He worked on my feelings until I believed nearly everything he said," Mrs. Clarkson declared. "I believed he meant to be good and he took so much interest in me when my husband and I quarreled that I finally yielded to him and ran away."

Mrs. Clarkson denied emphatically she was infatuated with the burglar. She blamed her husband and declared her life at home had been unbearable.

"Some of them attempted to manipulate me. I carried a baton and they got the worst of it," Dr. Mark said that the police all along the line displayed "jellyfish indifference."

"I marched in the Maryland college women's section," she said. "The Maryland section, just ahead of us, carried a large Maryland state flag. The police stood by idly while the crowd which surged close about the marchers spat on the flag and threw lighted cigarettes and matches into it. The police appeared to get a great deal of pleasure out of the parade and the antics of the crowd."

"They jeered and smiled at the marchers."

"One woman, who was a marshal of the section preceding mine, was pinched by men all along the line of march. Police made no effort to interfere. I could see them pinch her from where I marched. She showed me her arm afterward. It was black and blue from wrist to shoulder."

"I saw a man leave the crowd and clutch a girl in the line under the chin, tear her sash and try to put his arm around her. I went to her as

POLICE PERMITTED OUTRAGES, DECLARE WOMEN AT HEARING

WASHINGTON, March 15.—Some samples of militant suffrage were today expounded to the senate committee investigating the disorder which attended the suffrage parade of March 3.

Dr. Mary D. Mark of Maryland told of her physical efforts to defend the girls in the parade from the intentions of men in the crowd.

"I heard him make a very ugly remark to a woman in front of me. He prepared to say something to me, but as he opened his mouth my baton accidentally struck him in the mouth. I think his teeth went down, because he gulped a great deal. I haven't heard what he was going to say."

Miss Alice Finley, who marched with a section of striking girl garment workers from Baltimore, told of a number of attempts by men in the crowd to ill treat girls in her section.

She said that several times she was forced to go to the assistance of girls whom men tried to pull from the parade.

"The police made no attempt to interfere with these men," said Miss Finley.

Several other witnesses said they believed the police had done all in their power to control the crowd.

IRELAND WILL SOON GET HOME RULE, SAYS BRYAN

WASHINGTON, March 15.—Home rule for Ireland inside of two years was the prediction made by William J. Bryan, secretary of state, in an address at St. Patrick's day banquet given by Irish-Americans tonight.

Mr. Bryan based his prediction upon the time the Irish home rule again would be before the English parliament and that the house of commons, being controlled by the Irish members, it again would be passed by that body and would not require the concurrence of the house of lords.

Landscape Artist
Will Visit Springs

Thomas Moran, the famous landscape artist who, at the age of 70 is at work on a canvas of the Grand Canon of the Colorado, may come to Colorado Springs this summer to paint views of the region. In an interview with Carl Balcomb of this city, who is making an extensive lecture tour in California in the interests of the various attractions of this section, the artist stated that he had never realized before the great beauties of the Pikes Peak region and that he would try to make his plans in order to be here some time this summer.

Balcomb's lectures, a new departure in resort advertising, are proving successful on the coast. He has given his illustrated travologue of this section in all the large hotels in California, which are thronged with eastern visitors, and says that the interest shown has been phenomenal.

Balcomb writes: "The hotel men here have told me almost unanimously that the illustrated lecture idea is the best community advertising feature that they have seen there."

Balcomb will return about April 20 and will give two illustrated lectures, probably at the Princess theater.

Improvements of $30,000 Planned for the Roby Ranch

Articles of incorporation of the Farm Products, Land and Investment Company, with a capitalization of $100,000, were filed yesterday in the office of the county clerk. The company is organized for the purpose of operating and developing the Roby ranch, eight miles south of Colorado Springs on the Canon City road.

The property, consisting of about 1,000 acres of valuable and improving water rights, was recently purchased by J. F. Rose from the heirs of W. H. Roby, for a consideration of approximately $30,000. The directors of the company are M. Von Bostrom, U. S. Senator J. F. Rose, T. H. Rose and C. C. McCreer.

Improvements amounting to more than $30,000 will be made on the property to provide facilities for farming and dairying on an extensive scale. A number of sites are to be erected for the storage of the crops which are to be fed to the dairy stock.

On the property is a reservoir with storage capacity of 10,000 acre feet of water for irrigation. Another smaller reservoir is to be enlarged to the same capacity. About 1,200 acres will be sown in alfalfa, while the remaining 800 acres for the present will be used for pasture and grazing. There are 300 head of cattle on the farm, 100 of which now are dairy stock.

The wrecker was sent from Goodland, Kan., and traffic was reopened last night.

COMMITTEE WORKING FOR JR. O.U.A.M. CONVENTION

The special committee appointed by Duquesne council No. 12, Jr. O. U. A. M., to secure, if possible, the national council of that order for this city in 1913, is busy. This week the "American," the monthly paper of the order, gives liberal space to the committee in the effort to land the convention for Colorado Springs. William A. Spencer, C. W. Stevenson and A. B. Risk comprise the convention committee. Mr. Spencer, chairman of the committee, in this week's issue of the "American," praises this city and declares it to be the most desirable convention city in the west. He also writes of the state convention of the order, which meets here in May. The paper goes into the homes of more than 300,000 members.

TO THE VOTERS OF COLORADO SPRINGS

I have lived, a citizen among you, for many years. I am a candidate for commissioner at the next election. I shall not bother you with a statement of my position on all public matters, but will say that as a member of your school board and of the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce, and if elected, as a member of the city administration, I will use every honorable effort for the advancement of the community in which we live and in which we all have an honest pride. I will make one pledge to you now, and that is, that I will not be a burden to the business of my office. I was one of the members of the charter convention.

PERSONS STATES POSITION ON LEGISLATIVE MEASURES

The following self-explanatory statement regarding his position in a number of bills now before the state legislature has been issued by Representative Warren S. Persons of this city.

March 13, 1913.

To the People of El Paso County.

As representative to the Nineteenth general assembly from El Paso county I have received a large number of letters, telegrams and postals asking to support the discriminatory houses and to oppose house bill No. 41, designed to support discriminatory houses.

Also to oppose house bill No. 37, allowing cities to establish segregated vice districts, senate bill No. 40, to establish a state athletic commission, and senate bill No. 226, to establish a state racing commission.

In consequence of the general interest in these measures I will make a public statement of my position on them.

I have already voted against the compilation measure to senate bill No. 90 (being house bill No. 121) and expect to vote and work against house bill No. 37 and senate bill 336 and in favor of house bill No. 415 when these measures come up for consideration.

In this compilation of the state that I believe the action and expression of opinion of the legislative body from my constituents. In fact as in name I desire to be their representative. I expect and hope that my record will be scrutinized by those constituents.

SHAFROTH KNEW; SO DOES AMMONS

—Clayton

STATE FUNDS KEPT FOR SOME TIME

Gives Denver Insurance Concern Strong Indorsement.

Many Are Asking Why

By R. M. MCINTOCK

DENVER, March 13.—State Insurance Commissioner W. L. Clayton who collected about $60,000 from insurance companies under protest, pending the supreme court's decision, to be an income tax, is said to hold this amount in his possession for some time, despite efforts to get him to turn over the money to State Treasurer Treadwell, who is behind him in the scheme.

Clayton admits obtaining $60,000 on property in Greeley but denies that there is any wrong in the act. He says former Governor Shafroth knew of the transaction and approved it. He even says Governor Ammons sees no harm in it, considering it as a business matter.

Insurance Company Report

In the February number of Insurance Report issued this week there is a large advertisement of the German-American Life Insurance Company of Denver. This is one of the companies that is backing Insurance Commissioner W. L. Clayton in his demand for insurance laws exempting the Colorado companies from the payment of the one tax now paid by them in the body of the advertisement conspicuously displayed is this endorsement:

State of Colorado
Insurance Department
Denver, February 1, 1913.
J. C. Burger, President The German-American Life Ins. Co. Denver—

Dear Sir:—
The insurance department of the state of Colorado has completed an examination of the German-American Life Insurance Company of Denver Colorado as of December 31, 1912, and found no company to be in sound financial condition.

The company has $100,000 in approximated securities on deposit with the state of Colorado for the protection of its policyholders there being $100,000 in excess of the amount required by law.

Very truly yours,

WILLIAM L. CLAYTON, Commissioner of Insurance.

On February 1, 1912, Clayton borrowed $21,500 from the German-American company. On November 4, 1912, he borrowed an additional $1,550. These loans were not made to Clayton personally, but to the Clayton Investment Company, controlled by him. The security is property in Greeley, in which it is owned by the company.

Indirect Self Indorsement

Of the $200,000 in securities deposited with the insurance commissioner by the German-American company, therefore it is evident that over $25,000, one-eighth of the entire amount is the security for the two loans made to the insurance commissioner. As president of the Clayton Investment Company, therefore, Clayton solicited the loan. And now as insurance commissioner he certifies to the public that the securities that he himself gave are good.

It is possible that are. There have been rumors from up Weld county that Clayton secured a very much higher valuation than anyone else could secure as a basis for these loans. This is merely a rumor, however, there has been nothing in the way of proof. But the kind of relatives that have been entered into between the Colorado companies and the insurance commissioner lay both of them open to such charges, and are bound inevitably to breed scandal.

In this same issue of the Insurance Report another of the Colorado companies the Aegis, which is also backing Clayton in his fight to retain office and to secure a new insurance code favoring the Colorado companies, and which has loaned Clayton $16,600, proudly prints its list of officers and directors. The vice president is S. R. Fitzgerald, lieutenant governor of the state. The second vice president is John F. Vivian, United States surveyor or customs, Republican politician. The treasurer is L. C. Greenlee, former treasurer of Denver, Democratic politician. One of the directors is A. K. Parrish, state senator from Lamar, Republican politician. And one of the heaviest stockholders is said to be E. T. Napier, state senator from Glenwood, Democratic politician.

activity in congress will begin at an early date.

Committee Has Been Inactive.

The senate committee on woman suffrage had heretofore been known as a "minority committee." It has not met for years. Democratic leaders notified the Republicans early today that they proposed to enlarge the committee and take over the chairmanship. As finally organized by the senate, the committee includes: Senator Thomas, Colorado, chairman; Senators Owen, Oklahoma, Ashurst, Arizona, Ransdall, Louisiana; Hollis, New Hampshire, Clepp, Minnesota; Sutherland, Utah, James, Washington, and Catron, New Mexico.

Senator Jones is chairman of the special committee now investigating the failure of the police to properly protect the great suffrage parade in Washington, March 3.

"The proposal to give women the right of suffrage through a constitutional amendment is becoming a question of constantly growing importance," said Chairman Thomas today. "I have taken the chairmanship of this committee because I believe I can do some effective work for the extension of suffrage to the women of the country."

What the Press Agents Say

THE COWBOY MILLIONAIRE AT THE PRINCESS

One of the best pictures that you will see this season will be shown at the Princess on Monday and Tuesday. It is a story of the famous Diamond S Ranch, Prescott, Ariz.

"This high-brow life is killing me. I'm sending you special train. Bring the whole outfit, horses and all. This town needs excitement. Come and help wake it up." "BUD."

The outfit arrives at a swell suburban station. Bud leads the way in his auto, and the boys follow at breakneck speed on their horses. The shouting, shooting, punching in their chaps and sombreros, soon creates wild excitement on the otherwise peaceful streets of the suburbs. Bud puts the entire outfit up at his palatial home. That evening Bud takes them to the theater to see that melodrama, "Bertha, the Sewing Machine Girl." The boys take exception to the villain's treatment of Bertha, and the play is stopped by the shooting that follows. Then Bud takes the outfit for a cruise on his private yacht. Sea sickness is one animal that the boys cannot ride, so they put in port and return to the house. After a week of such excitement, Bud decides that he has had enough and the boys are sent back to the west in the private train.

After the departure Bud turns to his wife and arm in arm they go to Bud's den. Bud turns his Hoskin painting face to the wall and solemnly lifting his right arm, he swears, "Never again."

Of course, the Princess stands for pictures of quality, and you cannot afford to miss this picture. Remember, this is the best western drama that you will see in years to come. Be sure to see it.

First Reel. "Bud" Noble, a handsome specimen of virile westerners, is foreman of the Diamond S' ranch of Prescott, Ariz. The opening scenes of the story show "Bud" and his cowboys, together with those of other nearby outposts, on their weekly half-holiday in the town of Prescott. The little street of the town looks like a wild west arena, as the boys indulge in their sports and dare devil pastimes. Several broncos are brought in and, unwillingly, saddled. Then the fun begins. Bronco-busting and bronco-busters everywhere. This changes to the flying pickups, riding the bucking mule, bulldogging, roping and tying steers, horses, etc. Just then the local operator hands "Bud" a telegram. The message reads:

"Your uncle is dead. You are sole heir to his estate, valued at several million. Come at once."

"Bud" leaves Prescott for Chicago. Upon his arrival in the windy city he is directed by a kind-hearted police to the office of the attorney. Upon his arrival at the office, however, his interest is centered in the lawyer's pretty stenographer. She returns his gaze of admiration and soon the two are fast friends. "Bud" asks if he may call that evening and become better acquainted. She tells him that he may. That evening, when he leaves her boarding house, the pretty stenographer has promised to be "Bud's" wife.

Second Reel.

One year later we see our cowboy hero in the midst of the social swirl of effete Chicago. It is one constant, monotonous round of theaters, dances, parties, cruises, clubs, etc. "Bud" is tired of it all and longs with aching heart for the fresh air of the west.

Shall We Have a Wide Open Sunday? ?

By R. M. MCCLINTOCK.

But seek ye first his kingdom and his righteousness. (Matt. vi. 33.)

In his matchless Sermon on the Mount, the most splendid compilation of ethical teachings ever made, Jesus told his disciples they were not to be anxious about the material things of life.

"If God doth so clothe the grass of the field, which today is, and tomorrow is cast into the oven, shall he not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith? Be not therefore anxious, saying, What shall we eat? or, What shall we drink? or, Wherewithal shall we be clothed? For after all these things do the Gentiles seek: for your heavenly father knoweth that ye have need of all these things."

And then he points out to them that they are to place first in their thoughts, at all times, the things that are really first: "But seek ye first his kingdom and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you."

Food and drink and clothes are absolutely essential to life. Jesus did not mean that men were not to seek to supply their necessary wants; only that they should not allow their minds to be concentrated wholly on these things, that, after all, are of use only as they make men able to do the real work for which they are placed on earth.

If men are to seek, even before they seek food and drink and clothing, God's kingdom and God's righteousness, how much more are they to seek these first things before they seek mere fleeting pleasures? Pleasures are as necessary to the rounded life as are food and drink and clothing; the life that has been denied all innocent pleasures is a life that will be almost certainly out of sympathy with the mass of men.

But pleasure is not man's sole aim, nor his greatest aim, in life. There is no sin in going to the picture show, to the theater, to a band concert. All those things may be made to minister effectively to man's life. But they are not the first things. God's kingdom and God's righteousness are first.

The kingdom of God is not some far-off, mystical aspiration, never to be realized. When the old Jew spoke of the kingdom of God, as he often did, he meant a kingdom of God right here on earth, where justice would take the place of injustice, where wrong would give way to right, where the strong would care for the weak, where all men would live as brothers.

Jesus was a Jew, and Jesus, when he spoke of the kingdom of God, meant just what the Jews meant. He believed in the possibility of the establishment of the kingdom of God on earth. In that faith he lived, in it he died, leaving to those who were to come after him the carrying out of what men's hatred had prevented him from accomplishing.

And it is this kingdom, this righteousness, that men are to seek first. They have not always done it; men misunderstood Jesus, and for ages they believed this old world was merely a place of wickedness and sin, and that God's kingdom was spiritual, reserved for those who should inherit eternal life. And so, conceiving that all they could hope for in this world was to fit themselves for the next, they shut themselves up in monasteries, and, later, in churches, imagining that God's kingdom and the world were two entirely distinct principalities.

In Colorado Springs we are being asked to vote for an initiated ordinance that will, in effect, turn Sunday into a week day. Few people of today believe in the old Puritan idea of the Sabbath. It is generally realized that Sunday is the only day on which many men and women can get out into these glorious mountains and take in the beauties of this rich inheritance of nature God has given us. No one would begrudge to the men and women who toil all the innocent relaxation, the new strength and inspiration, that can be gained from a day in the open.

But is there any real necessity for opening our theaters on Sunday? Is it necessary for the establishment of the kingdom of God on earth that men and women and children attend the "movies" or a burlesque show on the day that has been set aside for rest and worship?

That is a question the people of Colorado Springs should seriously ask themselves before voting on this ordinance. There are six days in the week, and every afternoon and every evening of all those six days the people can attend moving picture shows, and on many of the afternoons and nights the theater. Isn't it possible for people to get all the entertainment of this kind they really need during these six afternoons and nights?

Business is all right in its place, but its place is not first. Even the business of supplying the wants of men in regard to food and drink and clothing, Jesus said, must come after the seeking of God's kingdom. And how much more, then, the business of catering to men's senses, and those, often, by exciting the baser passions?

How often has that cry been heard, It will hurt business! How many times has righteousness been forced to give way to wrong, because righteousness would hurt business? How many centuries has the coming of the kingdom of God on earth been postponed, because the kingdom of God would hurt business?

And the age-old cry is a cruel lie. No clean, decent, respectable business is hurt by making it subordinate to the things that should come first. Any business that deserves to exist will be better, not worse, after the kingdom of God is set up on earth. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and all these things shall be added unto you."

It is true that a town must be run wide open, with noise and bright lights and the popping of champagne corks on Sunday, in order to attract tourists. If it were, then it would be better for Colorado Springs to go out of the "Sabbath." But it is not. There are tourists who travel primarily for those things, of course. But the great mass of them seek rest and quiet and relaxation. Will such folks shun Colorado Springs because of its quiet Sunday? Will they not rather seek this city, as travelers in the desert seek the shadow of a great rock?

Probably we shall not see the kingdom of God on earth. Our generation is too lacking in faith, too devoted to the pursuit of material wealth. But do we not all of us want to leave a better earth for our children? May they not, if we give them a fair chance, see some of our visitors realize it? And will the opening of the theaters on Sunday help them in any way to prepare for the work that is before them? Will it increase their faith? Will it bring them any clearer conception than they now have of what the great work of life is?

True Sabatianism avails nothing. The worship only of forms and creeds is an abomination. Men driven to church do not, as a usual thing, gain much from the services.

But license is not liberty. Young people can be left too much to their own devices. Young blood is hot blood; temptations are too numerous at best; the will to resist is not as strong as it becomes in later years, after much exercise.

This ordinance should be looked at from the point of view of first things. Does it aid in bringing the kingdom of God, or does it hinder its coming? O, the materialists will shrug their shoulders, and point to this attitude as evidence of an extreme idealism, of a weak sentimentalism that is not for this world. But it's just because we've left things to the materialists for so many years, it's because we haven't had the courage of our own convictions, it's because in spite of all our talk we've had, so little faith, that in nineteen centuries the kingdom has made so little progress.

So let's look at this ordinance from a new point of view.

Will its passage make it easier to bring up our boys and girls?

Will it increase their reverence and respect for those things in life that really count?

Will it really minister in any uplifting way to any person, young or old?

Is it really needed by the people?

Will it increase the attractiveness of Colorado Springs to any large proportion of really desirable tourists?

As to the restaurant provision, will that serve any real need?

Cannot men continue to exist without endangering their health or their finances, without so greatly enlarging the supply of Sunday liquors?

And, finally, is it the great aim of the government of Colorado Springs to extend business, or to make men and home a better place to live in from the battles and the march of life?

Let the people in Colorado Springs discuss. If there are business men who feel that making money is the first thing in life, or who believe the churches have failed sufficiently, to emphasize the importance of the things that are really true. If the church had been faithful to the teachings of Jesus, long ago the idea that business was first would have perished from the earth.

So, if a large proportion of our people put first in their lives money, or the things money will buy, it is because we have failed, and our faiths have failed in our duty. And there are business men—there are men who have developed conscience. There are men who actually hurt their business in order to remain true to their convictions. There are amusement men who believe in the day of rest, who are satisfied with the six-day business, and who do not want this ordinance, but they will have to follow suit if the others open on Sunday.

Business is what the community makes it, no better, no worse. It cannot afford to violate the civic conscience. But business is driven, by the law of competition, to approach a level. If one man opens on Sunday, and the community wants it, the others have to follow suit. If one man pays his help starvation wages, and the community does not object, the others must do the same or go out of business.

The amusement business in Colorado Springs has not been injured by Sunday closing. It has been put on a higher plane. The city has demanded more than other cities have, and the business men have responded, as they always do.

The world has gone money-mad. Material success has been the only thing sought, and it has been worshiped, no matter how it has been acquired. There must be an abrupt about-face, if the kingdom of God on earth is ever to be realized. And this is as good a time as any to assert the new faith.

Maybe it's not as important to preserve the old American Sunday as it is to do justice between all men. But it is a means towards that end. Justice must wait upon brotherhood, and brotherhood can come only through a recognition of the fatherhood of God. And how are the men and women of tomorrow going to learn to know God, if the day set apart to him is to be made simply a day of excitement?

Colorado Springs has, in its quiet Sundays, an almost priceless possession. Colorado Springs should, by all means, hold fast to what she has. And then she should press forward in the great battle to establish here on earth the kingdom for which Christ died.

Be very sure that the leaders in this great fight will be the boys and girls who have been taught to put first things first.

By EDWARD T. DEVINE.

The end is in sight. Shops are concentrating, houses are being demolished where they are no longer needed, purchases of materials are made cautiously, army officers are speculating about future details, the Federation of Women's Clubs has held its last annual meeting. And yet, notwithstanding the unmistakable signs of an early end, there are at the moment more men actually employed on the canal zone than at any previous time—over 40,000. The whole organization is working at its maximum capacity.

Yes, this is the time to see the canal, the hospitals and the penitentiary are in smooth working order. The quarters supplied by the authorities are fully occupied—congested, at some places, the official reports say—and besides, while villages of unfinished commercial tenements are crowded, really congested, with laborers, and their families. Congestion of population and extortionate rents are among the sights of the canal zone which may be less in evidence next year than this. The "red light" districts of Panama and Colon with no doubt remain, at least for a while, and the lottery (for these are not the devils) upon the quartermaster's department.

School attendance is not com-

Elman Concert Tuesday Proves Musical Treat

Mr. Elman ought to have the most favorable idea of the people of Colorado Springs, as indeed he must of people all over the world. The lighting of the Burns, and the absence of footlights, made it possible to watch the faces of those who listened to the music Tuesday evening, and as the composer and the player united to give the wonderful treat, the individual traces of worry and perplexity and doubt smoothed themselves out, and each face took on the best expression it was capable of. There was some visitfulness over failures in the past, in that composite expression of all the faces turned toward the stage and the player, or looking far beyond the house and the people there; and, since music is never wholly sad, there was hope in the thought of the future and its opportunities.

There was none of the traditional coldness of the Colorado Springs audience in the applause that greeted each number. Not satisfied with the appearance of the young Russian two or three times, after some of the numbers, the people demanded encores. And, a most unusual thing, they remained in their seats after the last number, until the insistent applause succeeded in bringing the violin out for one last time.

It was one of the evenings when one lost sight of social distinctions. The audience was a brilliant one, with most of society represented. But its members were there as music lovers, and boxes and gallery joined in the applause.

means so much expenditure when a girl is away from home, could be maintained, and how long the nourishment contained in even a 15-cent dish would be procurable; and finally, she wondered whether, if the struggle went against the girl in the end, there was home that she could go back to, or whether—

But she was always wondering about the brave, bright girls who start out, so full of hope that there is a place for them in the world. Most of them, she knew, find one eventually. But subconsciously she heard the waitress ask a low-toned question, "I hope you got the place?" She looked up then, to see that the lips of the girl opposite quivered a little, as she tried to say nonchalantly, "No, they wanted some one with experience."

"Say, is that so? Ain't that too bad?" Well, there'll be something in tomorrow's paper probably, and you an' I and that, say, and we spoke lower, "the macaroni and cheese is awfully good tonight. You know there's a lot of nourishment in macaroni and cheese."

She waited then for the order, and the busy woman was sure that the girl's eyes wandered to the price column, to see whether the moderate delight of macaroni and cheese came within the means of those who lacked experience and those who sat, silent, in setting positions. And then, bravely and carelessly, she gave her order. "And that will be all tonight, I think," she said.

The busy woman wondered whether there would be something in the next day's paper that would solve the girl's problems for her. If not, she wondered how long the immobility of white shirt waist and jabots, that

At the annual congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution, to be held as usual in Washington during the week of the anniversary of the battles of Lexington and Concord, one of the interesting things on the program will be the singing of the essay, "Colorado," composed by Mrs. William Wells Price, by Mrs. H. H. Seldbridge. The song, as sung by Miss Alice Chase at the state conference in Denver last week, scored its usual success; and as it will be given in Washington, by the wife of the congressman from this district, herself a member of Zebulon Pike chapter, it will doubtless be as well received.

Captain Amundsen Entertained

Those who were fortunate enough to meet Captain Roald Amundsen socially during the day of his stay here found him a man of delightful personality—ranging about his own attainments, but with plenty of enthusiasm for those of others. He was particularly impressed with the scenery of the Pikes Peak region, and with Colorado Springs. Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Dodge took the distinguished visitor for a motor trip over some of the interesting drives, and then to their home for tea before the afternoon lecture. In the evening Captain Amundsen, with President and Mrs. Stoen, were guests at dinner at the Dodge home. Since the time was limited the affair was necessarily somewhat informal, but it was very pleasant for all who were present.

Celebrated Eighth Birthday

Last week was the eighth anniversary of Master Dalton Brooks' birth, and 10 of his friends were invited to help him celebrate the event. The party was given at the Brooks home, 221 West Las Animas street, from 2 till 5. Lively games and contests were enjoyed by the youngsters, and the end came all too soon. Great was the delight of the guests when they were summoned to the dining room, to see the beautiful birthday cake with its tiny lighted pink and white candles and the white and pink decorations of the table. Of course, they enjoyed the supper and left wishing the young host all sorts of good things. The guests were: Mary Deffenbaugh, Margaret Brooks, Ros Britzman, Russell Fitzpatrick, Roland Steele, Dan Kehler, Lewis Ladd, Theodore Ferguson, Elbert Steele, Clegg Wilson, Robert Reader, and Dalton Brooks.

One of the first affairs to be scheduled for the post-Lenten season is the "Blue Bird" dance to be given at the Acadia hotel Wednesday evening March 26. MRS. HENRY F. DIMOCK

Those in a position to know predict that Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, the new first lady of the land and official social leader in Washington, will be far more popular among the social set than was her predecessor, as it is not expected that Mrs. Wilson will prove as stern and unbending social arbiter as was Mrs. Taft. Among the society leaders who will welcome Mrs. Wilson to Washington society is Mrs. Henry F. Dimock, president of the George Washington Memorial association, and a leader in New York and Washington circles. Mrs. Dimock is one of the women who has an "unofficial" but widely recognized place in a capital society.

During the first hour Mrs. W. W. Price and Mrs. David Law served ice cream from a beautifully appointed table, the teachers serving cake. The last hour Mrs. Wetherell and Mrs. Hoen presided.

About 150 men and women called during the afternoon to greet Miss Chambers and to wish her many more years in the district.

Many of her friends, who could not be present, sent flowers instead, and the Liller Improvement society sent a beautiful corsage bouquet of roses and sweet peas.

The whole afternoon was one of the pleasantest the people in the neighborhood have spent together.

No More Sea

At the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution of Morris town, N. J., the Morris County Chronicle recently printed a beautiful tribute to the memory of Mrs. Susan Boyleston Donagh, formerly a well-known resident here, who died on January 23. The tribute closes with some verse written by Mrs. Donagh, which are here reprinted:

Rev. xxi. 1.

O' gazer on the ocean, with its expanse of blue,
And all its sparkling waters reflecting heaven's own hue,
Say, with regretful feeling oft comes the thought to thee
That in the "new Jerusalem" there shall be "no more sea."

How fraught with deepest meaning, on Patmos' rocky isle,
To him, for whom no more the fields or verdant meadows smile,
That in that blessed country where "many mansions" be,
"A place" has been prepared for him where there is "no more sea."

No more in tuneful forest he bears the warblers sing,
Nor in Judea's sun-kissed land he sees the flowers spring,
No sights to gladden homesick eyes on that lone, rocky shore,
No music for his weary ears but ocean's ceaseless roar.

That sea is separation from fellowship with saints,
Divides from sweet companionship for which his spirit faints,
He strives with faith's keen vision God's purposes to scan,
Servant of Christ, disciple loved, that lonely, exiled man!

And when in angry tumult the foaming billows rise,
He views the shipwrecked perishing, with sad and pitying eyes,
Though in the raging waters engulfed the navies be,
Yet sweetly sounds the promise that there shall be "no more sea."

And God vouches His servant a beatific sight,
A glimpse of heaven's own glory; its rivers of delight,
Its flowers and fruits eternal, of life the healing tree,
And pastures ever vernal where there shall be "no more sea."

Oh grant us the blest vision, as to Thy seer of old,
Of that celestial dwelling, so glorious to behold,
Thou, who didst still the tempest on stormy Galilee;
Now, throned on high in majesty, where there is "no more sea."

Reception for Miss Chambers

As a mark of the affection in which she is held by the parents and children of the district, the ladies of the Liller district gave a reception Friday afternoon at the Liller cottage in honor of Miss Chambers' principal of the school. The cottage, which is the most attractive building of its kind in the city, was beautifully decorated. The blackboards were covered with green crepe paper, and above were branches of Japanese cherry blossoms. Big vases, improvised from waste baskets covered with the crepe paper, held more of the blossoms, and in addition there were quantities of cut flowers. The floors were covered with rugs. Receiving with Miss Chambers, who wore a beautiful gown of marquisette over navy blue satin, cut entrelaine, were Mrs. Nicholson, president of the Liller Improvement society, who wore a gown of tan silk; Mrs. C. M. Cole, in black marquise over roses; Mrs. Rosin, in blue crepe de chine, and Miss Kindig in black silk. During the first hour Mrs. W. W. I How to Make the Skin Clear and Pinky-White As a Rose

Valeska Suratt, the Self-Made Beauty-Actress Reveals Some of Her Precious Beauty Secrets

By Valeska Suratt

This cream should be applied very liberally and thoroughly rubbed into the skin until it has disappeared. The cream will not grow hair on the face. Keep the cream in an air-tight jar or bottle.

MISS N. S.—No matter how heavy or obscure your superfluous hair, you can get rid of it almost by magic by using simple soap solution.

This you can get at the drug store for one dollar. Apply it with the finger tips to the superfluous hair, keeping the hair moist for two or three minutes until it has been dissolved. Then wash the skin off with a damp cloth and wash the skin. It never reddens or irritates the skin.

MRS. F. T.—Yes, even mothers who have lost all their development as a result of nursing can surely regain it by using this formula for the bust:

Take a half pint of cold water, dissolve two tablespoons of sugar, add half a cup of sugar, all well mixed together. Of this, take two teaspoonsfuls three or four times a day in a wine-glass of water, after your meals. The routine will cost you one dollar at the drug store.

PRISCILLA—This is the formula for blackheads which you asked for. It is simple.

First wash the face with hot water and soap. Then sprinkle some borax generously upon a sponge made wet with hot water. Use this sponge for the application of the parts of the skin which are affected with blackheads. You should be able to secure the borax at any drugstore for fifty cents.

Laura N.—You can surely get rid of every pimple and prevent them from recurring. You have had it is astounding how many girls in the world have been thus beautified. If you make up your mind to use the formula faithfully, above all generously, you will achieve results you have so long sought.

Set half a pint of water, some glucose to it. Add two tablespoonsfuls of glycerine. Keep stirring while adding one ounce of zinc. Until it is all dissolved. Then it cool. If the cream is too thick to easily spread in a bottle, thin it down a little with more water. Use the cream as white and satiny. Hold a cloth over to the face several times for several minutes. Rub this cream on the entire skin. Then wipe off with a soft, dry cloth. Then apply again and let it dry on the entire skin. Repeat this again at night. Any drugstore will let you have zincite for fifty cents.

Rosella—Such a pretty name should with a youthful face. Mrs. wrinkles indicator will make you look years younger and it will not take very long to do it either. I call it my little miracle worker. Pour half a pint of hot water in a small place and add one ounce of zinc. Stir over a slow fire. To this add two drops of epote. Stir until it is dissolved. It starts to cream. Then remove from fire, slowly add two tablespoonsfuls of cerate, and continue to stir until it is smooth. Epote may be obtained for no more than fifty cents at any good drug store.

Never fail to use this shampoo on your hair. Never use soap. Egg, which you can get at any good druggist for twenty cents, is surprising in its action in cleaning the scalp of every particle of scurf.

WORK and PLAY in the IDLE HOUR

A Daffodil Luncheon Set

Answers to Correspondents

Bath Slippers of Turkish.

MISS S. F.—Bath slippers are quickly made, as the toweling is just shaped to cross the toes and then fastened to quilted soles.

A bit of embroidery is now used on almost every article of dress and bath slippers are no exception. Those made of Turkish toweling have a large, embroidered bow knot across the front, done in French knots. The design is entirely filled with the knots, and the effect is very good indeed.

The French knots are also used as a border to cover the rough edge of the toweling which is turned on the right side.

Doilies of Toweling.

Mrs. A. G.—A fine quality of tea toweling can be made into very charming table sets. The blue barred linen is used and when finished with scalloped edges of blue intercerized flax, the effect is very good.

A set consisting of a table runner, plate doilies and napkins would certainly prove a delight to the person who gives a charming dish parties.

An initial or monogram embroidered in blue would add very much to the effectiveness of the set.

Doilies of this sort would be especially charming if the china used had blue decorations.

Ribbon Plume.

AMr. W.—You should have no difficulty in making the ribbon plume. Three pieces of ribbon or satin are used and the length and width would depend entirely upon the size you wish the plume to be.

It is best to have the ribbon in three widths, allowing about one-half inch difference between each one.

Fringe the ribbon on both sides leaving a plain center of about one inch. Now lay one ribbon on top of another, the narrowest at the top. Gather the ribbons through the center and seam the ribbon to a point at one end.

A covered cable wire, which serves as

SPRING COTTONS ARE DELIGHTFUL

THROUGH the winter fabrics when they first appear interest us greatly, they seldom attract one so keenly as do the lovely summer weaves. Perhaps it is because we have had a softness of thick, heavy weaves when we first see them—perhaps we are rather tired of the more sumptuous cold weather weaves, but certain it is the first showing of the crisp cool looking cottons is always a particular feminine joy.

As you step into the dress goods shops one of the first fabrics to meet your eye will be the dotted swiss. They are most summer-like indeed in appearance and in charming colorings and designs. The white weave with little woven dots of varying sizes and the border of delicate or deeper coloring in the new designs is very effective and also fashionable. And occasionally there are fabric greater distinction. There are borders in Persian effects, borders in lovely floral patterns, and borders in

LATEST IN TOURIST HATS

From London, naturally enough, comes the latest model in tourist hats. It is an affair of water-proofed silk having a rounded crown and a two-inch broad brim, both sections closely matching, stitched in circling rows. Midway of each side of that hat is a slit extending from the outer edge to the brim to the lower edge of the crown and along one side of each slit extends a row of tiny buttons which fit over buttons attached to the side of the crown. By this means one-half the brim may be fastened neatly upward about the crown, leaving the remaining half to shield the brow and the tips of the ears. As the brim of hats of this sort invariably is faced with a color contrasting strongly with the outer side of the headgear, the effect of the two shades is exceedingly smart. Especially good are the hats in gun-metal of tan water-proofed silk faced with high-blue corsage of Irish linen and although originally designed for tourists they are smart for golfing and general wear in the country.

BY ELEANOR NORRIS

The spine of the plume is sewed from the point, covering the gathering and extending a short distance beyond the feather in the same manner as the spine of an ostrich tip.

Shake the ribbon over a steaming tea kettle and curl the ends with a curling iron, or if preferred the plume may be left uncurlled.

To Sew Braid.

V. G.—To make the braid can be more readily sewed in place if the part to be braided is put in embroidery hoop.

To correctly sew the braid, take a very small stitch on the right side and a long stitch on the underside. The stitch should be taken directly through the braid and down, as in embroidery.

The braid must be kept straight and smooth and if the goods is held firm by the embroidery hoop, the braid is more easily manipulated.

Pomegranate Stencil.

V. C. H.—The pomegranate stencil was designed and drawn exclusively for the paper, and you cannot purchase a print stencil of it. The stencil can, however, be transferred directly from the paper to stencil board, and the stencil can then be easily cut.

A cut stencil is not as difficult to make, and by making your own, you can soon have a good collection suitable for all kinds of decoration.

Stencils can be purchased in any art store, and it is not convenient, either a light weight cardboard, or heavy manila paper can be successfully used.

If you use either the paper or cardboard, transfer this design by means of impression paper to it, then go over the design with a sharp pencil, so that it will be perfectly clear, and also darken the portions that are to be cut out.

Before cutting off the paper by light-brushing it with linseed oil. Allow the oil to dry and then cut it with a sharp knife. Cut the stencil over glass, then the work will be facilitated and the stencil more clear cut.

After the stencil is cut, give it a coat of shellac, taking care that it does not settle in the corners. Allow the shellac to thoroughly dry before using the stencil. If it is suspended from an unused doorway or window, it will Large Centerpiece.

Miss V. M. H.—Am very sorry indeed not to be able to comply with your request, but a center the size you wish would be too large to publish.

One half of a center is sometimes given, but one half a center the size you wish would be too large to occupy the space devoted to the patterns, so it could not be published.

Fancy work centers in smaller sizes will be given, and then perhaps you will be able to use the motifs on a larger piece.

Novelties in Jewelry

THIS platinum and diamond pendant attached to a slender chain has so much the vogue are entirely shown in true-lover's knot form, and some have interchangeable pinnacles with enamel backgrounds, and in pale pink, green, electric blue, or black.

The heart design, too, is popular, more particularly that of the "two hearts that beat as one," with sapphires in amethyst, peridot or tourmaline center and the hearts outlined with frequent pearls.

Another fascinating pendant design is of a wreath of tiny leaves—the leaves represented by sapphires. Yet another design this is an old one and is greatly appreciated to-day as a hundred years ago is of a pansy in diamond and amethyst or topaz and amethyst.

Quite inexpensive pendants or "drops" are of New Zealand jade, amethyst or rose crystal. An attractive gift for a bridesmaid is a necklace of alabaster, amethyst and pearls with a tassel attached to them.

In men's scarf pins there is nothing very new. The fashionable waistcoat buttons and sleeve links are chiefly in mother of pearl with centers, and there are quite lovely cabochon buttons mounted with gold or platinum, or ones of colored enamel set in the center.

KNIFE-LENGTH WRAPS A NOVEL, FASTER FEATURE

A Rich Brocaded Wrap with the New Long Shoulder

Only Motor and Traveling Coats Now Full Length - Graceful, Draped Skirts Account for New, Short Wraps - Cossack Wraps for Restaurant Wear - Dainty Walking Coats for Summer.

No sartorial feature of the coming summer will be more memorable in days to come, than the pretty little wraps which are so picturesque and also so wonderfully convenient for wear over dainty frocks. Such a wrap covers a dressy frock just enough—and not too much. It allows the elegance of the frock to be revealed by a glimpse of its graceful drapery, yet discreetly covers up the elaborate bodice which might be a bit conspicuous, or even a trifling diaphanous for appearance in a public conveyance or on the street.

Through the enterprise and alertness of the American designers and manufacturers these gay little wraps, scarcely yet more than a novelty in Paris, are within the reach of all American women, and it depends only upon what one is able to pay, how elegant and distinctive or how simple and unassuming one's useful summer wrap may be. Some of the models are intended for carriage wear over light colored restaurant and theater gowns; others are, while distinctly of the dressy character, suitable for afternoon wear through the street above bridge or luncheon frocks. Still others are in the clearly tailored and utilitarian effect, and some of these tailored models, built of white or very light colored fabrics, will be ideal for beach and mountain wear over summery frocks. Two rather dressy afternoon wraps and two tailored wraps—one of white serge are included in today's illustrations, and will be taken up in detail further on. It will be noted that all these wraps have a general kinship in line; that is, they all give the same slender tapering effect to the figure, the shoulders being broad and roomy in cut, while the lower part of the garment is drawn closely around the knees, the hipping of the front emphasizing this closely wrapped effect.

Long Coats Still Retained for Special Uses.

A Mouse Gray Moire Wrap. Though the full length coat has had to take a back place, as far as a romanesque garment is concerned, it still forms the backbone of the wardrobe for city purposes. It is worn on stormy days for motoring, and for traveling. It hides completely the frock beneath—often a valuable attribute when one wants to run into town to attend a dinner and theater party, and a little shopping must be crowded into the affair also—and it does not mean the inevitable donning of a warm skirt of woolen material if the motor trip to be a cold one or the day on board a yacht is likely to end in a chilly homeward run after sunset. No, it is not likely that the capricious little three-quarter wrap-coat is going to burst from favor the tiled and true winter which in moments of stress is so cosy, comfortable and convenient, but such long coats this summer will be worn only for strictly utilitarian purposes.

The sister or utility coat pictured is a correct and modern model designed for steamer and traveling wear. It is of striped tan and green worsted, with a tufted weave and the neat satin cuffs and collar are dark green, stitched with white. The lines of the coat are excellent in their simplicity and grace, for the garment has the fashionable tapering effect toward the root for all its apparent straightness of cut. The collar, unbuttoned, falls back in long shawl collar, lined with light tan satin like the rest of the coat. The hat of dark red straw is trimmed with a velvet band to match and a red wing.

Chinese Wraps A Fad Of The Hour.

All the shops are advertising, as special features, just now, "genuine Mandarin coats" to be used as wraps. One cannot vouch for the genuine quality of all these so-called true Mandarin robes, but at any rate their Chinese origin is indisputable for no hands but Chinese hands could have produced such gorgeous embroideries in perfectly flat and precise effect on the rich silks.

One suspects it requires a deal of sang froid to appear in a Mandarin coat in an average evening assembly for their effect is anything but inconspicuous, and at any rate the women who do wear them seem very well satisfied at the sensation they usually create. Less pronounced than the Chinese wraps are the cosset-like wraps in three-quarter length, with sling drapery like deep hoods at the back and flowing sleeves set on low in the Chinese manner. A beautiful coat of this sort, modeled after a Paris wrap, is of coral-colored brocaded crepe de chine, the soft fabric being formed into thick cords which outline the shoulder and arm-hole seams and form huge, loose knots as ornaments. This wrap is loose, but straight in line, an inside belt holding the front closely against the figure, while the back falls straight from the shoulder under the sling drapery of the hood.

The brocade wrap pictured is entirely correct from every spring style standpoint and is the sort of wrap one may expect to see in Easter Day over an Easter frock of some soft, draped material. The brocade coat is built of gray moire brocaded silk has the low, Chinese shoulder, and tapering cut at the lower edge. It is lined with gray satin in the same soft gray shade and the simply designed collar and revers, as well as the turned back cuffs are of gray ottoman silk—a very fashionable silk, by the way, just now. The wrap is accompanied by a particularly chic turban of draped gray tulles with a blue velvet brim also tulles draped and a weird but exceedingly smart "devil feather" at one side. Below the well cut coat appears a trootie skirt of dark blue ottoman silk and buttoned walking boots of dull calf topped with gray suede.

The Scarf Tie A Popular Wrap Feature.

Another dressy coat in three-quarter length is of seal brown landsdowne with a lining of pinkish tan silk and embroidery in its open, lacy effect.

Easter bridemaids is to enclose the gifts in nests of Easter eggs—forty eggs sometimes to a nest, the sizes ranging from mammoth ostrich eggs to tiny hummingbirds' eggs and including the eggs of every known bird and fowl between. Of course the bit of jewelry is hidden away in the smallest egg and much fun and excitement will result from the prolonged search for the gifts.

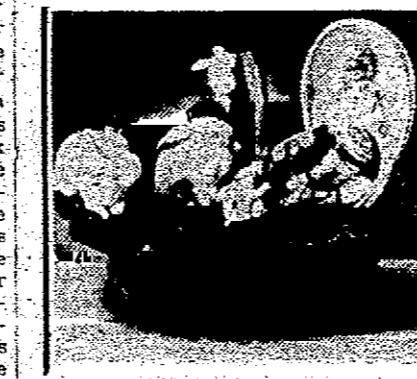

The elaborately decorated automobile illustrated will adorn the center of the table at a luncheon of very youthful bridesmaids this year. The car is of snow white wicker and is banked with white Easter flowers all made of paper. Underneath, instead of the usual collars, clutches, sparkling plugs and other belongings of a self-respecting automobile, are pounds and pounds of delicious bon bons. Each

Easter egg that swings from the top of the car holds a gift of jewelry and each downy chick carried as a passenger has tucked away in his "little inside"—an interesting fortune to be read aloud by the recipient.

The Easter boat will please the children at an Easter-week party. Captain Goose commands a crew of fluffy chicks and the smartly dressed doll at the prow may represent a prize offered for some simple game, played at the table.

The crepe paper basket is an ordinary basket covered with frills of green crepe paper held in place by ribbon. The handle of the basket is also wound with crepe paper. Such a basket may be filled with Easter flowers, toy souvenirs, or white Easter bunnies, each bunny in turn being filled with candy.

complexions and the white and gold luncheon table set out in a cheery dining-room with Easter sunlight filtering through lace window curtains will be both, possible and desirable.

Bridesmaids are usually only little girls just grown up to womanhood's estate and many of the dainty, tastefully intended for children, will hugely delight the young guests. The white Easter rabbits filled with bon bons, for instance, are distinctly lovely, with their long, pink lined ears and soft, big brown eyes and one of these rabbits filled with recognizably good candy, or with the now appallingly expensive salted almonds, will be a place-favor to please even a grown woman. At a bridesmaid's luncheon to occur this Easter season, each fair guest will have at her plate one of the pretty little clocks of white pyroxylin along with a dainty white photograph frame to match, a picture of the hostess adorning the white frame. Every girl these days is collecting a set of white dresser belongings and the cloche and frame, inexpensive in themselves will be much appreciated as luncheon souvenirs. Little white satin slippers, filled with flowers make charming souvenirs for a bridesmaid's luncheon and of course the slippers will be saved by the recipients to toss after the bridal equipment at the ensuing wedding. Footwear in the smaller sizes may often be picked up at bargain prices and three pairs of number one or number two satin slippers will make six place favors and the cost should not be excessive. White pasteboard slippers make pretty place cards and are easy to make. If one cannot draw a pretty slipper free-hand, a pattern may be obtained from any shoe advertisement. The slippers should all be cut from the plain white pasteboard and a tiny rosette of white chiffon attached to each. Many appropriate ready-made favors and place-cards may be obtained for a bridesmaid's luncheon at the novelty shop dealing in such articles. Among the list are small trunks tied with white satin ribbon, wedding bouquets, brides appropriately gowned and veiled, tiny cars or motor cars with white ribbons streaming from the back, and so on. These designs are done with water-colors on the white paste board and then cut out, a bit of the plain card being left for the name. Any girl skilful with her color brush can make such place-cards for her own luncheon and save the rather high price asked for such trifles in the stores.

Easter cards thrust through with flower pins or jabot pins make charming and acceptable luncheon favors and as much or as little as the bride desires may be expended for the gifts of jewelry. Another charming way to present trinkets or jewelry to which appears in the turned back revers and cuffs, and also as a facings on a broad, turned back collar. The scarf ties of black panne velvet, fringed at the end, add much smartness to this good looking coat.

Two Easter coats which will be worn at Atlantic City are pictured in the tailored models: one of dark blue serge with cuffs and revers of blue and white striped cotton velour; and the other a dainty model of white serge with deep shawl collar and cuffs of green and white striped agard. The latter coat may be worn over a dark frock if desired but it will be adorable over summer tailored frocks of linen or similar tub material, or sheer dresses of embroidery such as are the craze this season. With such all-white costumes, of course buttoned boots of white buckskin or white calf pumps will accompany the coat, though as shown in the picture, the dark walking skirt is matched by patent leather boots with buttoned tops or dull kid.

NEW HANDKERCHIEFS TRIMMED WITH EMBROIDERY.

THE machine embroidered handkerchief is of course not new at all, but decidedly new is a new mouchou of fine handkerchief linen edged with machine embroidery in a lace-like pattern. Machine embroideries have become very much the fashion and the new St. Gall patterns are so fine and beautiful that they are hardly distinguishable from hand-sewn real lace and are of course five times as durable for the life of a constant cubbing a handkerchief must lead. Bride's handkerchiefs of sheerest handkerchief linen with Teneriffe lace edge, in other words St. Gall embroidery—are among the novelties for bridal wear this Easter season and such a handkerchief would be no disgrace to the most distinguished wedding costume, so exquisite is the embroidery in its open, lacy effect.

The Easter egg that swings from the top of the car holds a gift of jewelry and each downy chick carried as a passenger has tucked away in his "little inside"—an interesting fortune to be read aloud by the recipient.

Some Recollections of the Pioneers

Stories of the days When Colorado Springs Was Young--Foot Racing a Popular Sport The First Bale of Alfalfa Big Game Plentiful Indians Were Frequent Visitors. General Palmer's Influence.

By F. L. ROUSE

RECOLLECTIONS of the early days of this city and county will no doubt be somewhat different from many others, and only by piecing out the various stories from many sources can an adequate history of the early days be obtained.

My first trip through El Paso county was in 1870, and the memory of that horseback ride has always remained. On that excursion I found railroad location stakes near the top of the divide that astonished me so that I dismounted to be sure the marks were really railroad location stakes. "Oh ye of little faith!" It seemed to me that a Mexican bull train could haul all the supplies this country would consume and give the bull whackers plenty of time to attend fandangos. Two years before, the terrible massacres had occurred on the divide and Indian stories were plenty and fearful.

My real introduction to Colorado Springs was in April, 1873, when the town was so new that a person who had been here six months had outgrown the tenderfoot stage, and was a real old timer. The most noted of all the camping places was Major McDowell's Log Cabin where a sign was said to read: "Lunch, 25¢; Meal, 50¢; Perfect Gorge, 75¢."

The Colorado Springs Hotel was an imposing two-story frame building on the corner of Pikes Peak avenue and Cascade, and at this corner the first stage was driven locating the present townsite.

To my question as to why the town was not laid out exactly north and south to correspond with Government lines, Mr. E. S. Neftleton, the colony engineer, replied: "When I first set up my instrument to get a bearing, Mr. General Palmer told me to set my transit straight for the Peak." This was done and this was the reason of the conflict between the Colorado Springs survey and the Government survey.

The growth was surprising for a community that had such limited resources as we believed we had at that time. Cattle, sheep and "lumbers" seemed the only occupation for the residents. The sheep and cattle men were the aristocrats of those days until a hard winter made the selling of hides and pelts their chief occupation.

Agriculture on the plains was unthinkable, alfalfa was unheard of. The first bale of alfalfa was exhibited at the first fair held in El Paso county in 1873 by Judge E. A. Smith, on whose ranch is was grown, about three miles north of Fountain. So far as I know this was the first alfalfa grown in this county. No estimate can be made of the value of this crop to the county. Marked improvement was noticeable in the prosperity of the ranchmen as soon as it was fairly introduced.

FOOT RACING WAS POPULAR

Joel Roe was on hand with his old trotting horse, Eagle Bird, and won the races, as usual. There was a good deal of sporting blood among the citizens and impromptu running races were frequent. Foot racing was at one time popular and some of the young men had reputations as local athletes. One summer day a wagon load of sawmill hands, road in from Comer's mill, which was located in Bijou Basin and after some preliminary skirmishing, announced that one of their boys could run some, and if they had anybody who could run, they might get up a race and put up enough money to make it interesting.

The sports soon took notice that a game to their liking was to be had, and a match was arranged. The course was Cascade avenue. When the runners were ready to score the mill hand shed his pitch-covered overalls and appeared in a fine suit of running tights, came to the score in style and before reaching the 100-yard limit looked over his shoulder to see where his competitor was. Of course the sports lost to the lumber jacks a goodly sum. They were consoled by the promise that they would be given a chance to make their losses good if they would get up another foot race and back the winner.

Soon after this event a young fellow drifted into Pueblo with a freight outfit, who bragged a good deal about his ability to run some, and in some mysterious way our sporty friend learned that there was a chance to make their money back. Our champion of Comer's mill was persuaded to make an effort to reimburse his new found friends and incidentally to make a winning for himself. The race was arranged.

Our friends accompanied the champion to Pueblo. Money was freely offered and freely taken. Watches and jewelry were bet when money gave out. No bets were offered that were not quickly taken. The course selected laid to the east of Pueblo on the road leading toward the end of the Santa Fe railroad, then building into Pueblo.

They got a fine start, but the mule Skinner could outfoot the sawmill hand and ran away from him in fine style. But the sawmill hand had great endurance and did not stop at the score but kept straight down the road where he took a waiting carriage and on to the Santa Fe train that bore him away from the necessity of making excuses and explanations. Our foot racer's name was Crandall and he was then the fastest 100-yard runner in the United States. It is needless to say that foot racing was not popular after this episode.

BIG GAME PLENTIFUL

Game abounded. In the east on the plains were thousands of antelope. One bright afternoon an antelope came down Tejon street on an exploring expedition until frightened by boys and dogs, when it made a few bounds and disappeared up Shook's Run. The grassy hills about Cripple Creek were a favorite resort of a small herd of bison. They were range herded by a hunter who killed a few each year and brought the meat down here for sale. Antelope were sold in town by hunters, who usually got $1.00 per saddle, and peddled it out much as potatoes now are by the ranchmen.

There were some mighty hunters in those days: Jim Hamblin, Old Man Andrews, Jim Remaley, Mart Irving and probably others whose names have escaped my memory, were famous as expert game getters. Bears frequently were seen on Cheyenne mountain and trapped or shot.

Mining excitements were of annual occurrence: Cheyenne mountain being the favorite location of wonderful strikes. Every one known to mineralogists has been discovered in those granite hills, and thousands of prospectors have spent time and money in a vain effort to strike it rich.

Cripple Creek was discovered by an old settler, Bob Womack, and was at the time of discovery in El Paso county. It was in a large measure developed by Colorado Springs enterprise and money and Colorado Springs has reaped the reward.

Public schools were first held in two small rooms, one on the present site of the Alamo hotel, and the other opposite on the present site of Peltz's store. Miss Julia D. Brauner and Miss Helen McG. Ayers were the first teachers. Mrs. A. Sutton conducting the primary school on South Cascade, where the commission houses now stand.

There was no attempt at grading for perhaps a year, when the school was removed to a building previously occupied by Field and Hill, outfitters and forwarding merchants, on Cascade avenue. Mr. L. G. C. Copley was engaged as principal, and Miss Brauner and Miss Ella Beacher, afterwards Mrs. Gittings, as teachers.

In the first years the life Indians on their annual passage from the mountains to the plains to hunt buffalo and fight the Cheyennes and Arapahoes, used to stare in at the windows, much to the annoyance of teachers and delight of pupils. One buck was lured into the school room and entertained by Charley Barker, showing him pictures in the geography of Indian massacres and various other pictures that used to adorn the geographies in those days. Many of you doubtless remember the annual visits of these Indians, and their persistent begging. A favorite camping place was on Fountain Creek near Duxbury Park, after a successful raid on the Arapahoe Indians and the capture of large herds of ponies, they were a very happy set. Whether there were scalps taken or not, I do not know.

They were ready to trade ponies for white squaws. One buck rode up to a front gate and offered three ponies for a white squaw. While his brother-in-law was dickered and had worked the buck to offer five ponies, his squaw rode up and quirked her buck's pony with the grunt: "Nuff squaw, heap squaw" and they rode away. Doubtless she later developed into a snifflerette.

INFLUENCE OF THE GAZETTE

This city has been blessed and I say blessed purposely with a newspaper from the first life of the town that has been clean, progressive and public spirited. The work of The Out West, rechristened The Gazette, has always been an important factor in the prosperity of this community.

No sketch of the early days would be complete without reference to the Colorado Springs company of which General William J. Palmer was the head. No land promotion company ever more faithfully carried out their responsibility to their patrons. Instead of booming the town, gathering the harvest and abandoning the purchases to their fate, they stood manfully by, helping in every way to promote the interests of the community. Every church organization received a lot on which to build, and substantial aid in other ways. No public enterprise was suggested that the aid and counsel of the Colorado Springs company was not sought, and no worthy, public spirited cause went unheeded by them.

Financially their reward was not great, but what was more worth while, the upbuilding of a splendid community, notable for many excellencies that have given us a name not to be ashamed of. This is the result of the seed sown not only by the Colorado Springs company, but by the pioneers. I shall not moralize, but the pioneers can, like the political speakers, "point with pride to the splendid city they have built, to the prosperous community they have founded, to the educational institutions they have fostered."

Pikes Peak

By E. W. DAVIS.

Grand, majestic, towering high,
Seeming almost to pierce the sky,
For ages long thy rocks and hills,
Thy wooded glens and rugged hills,
Held soon no chance were lost the same,
Too little known to have a home,
Who was the first of human race
To gaze upon thy time-scarred face?
We know not have no means to trace,
Nothing to show his name or what his race,
Time passed—long years it might have been,
Save aught but savage looked on thee again,
At length to our fathers it seemed best,
To have a better knowledge of the West,
For our possessions had been much enlarged, they said.

And fifteen millions for the same they had paid.

To see what they had bought, what it was like,
A company formed, it was led by Pike.

How long did they travel home living can remember,
But history states until some time in November.

The nights were cold, the winds were bleak,

In vain for shelter did they seek,

When at last they viewed the Peak

For three long days they trudged toward the goal

With weary limbs and breathless souls.

The Peak was reached, the date now known

November fifteenth, Eighteen Sixty.

Long time the Peak that bears Pike's name

Was little known—much less to fame.

Full fifty years in point of date—

To be exact, was Eighteen Fifty-eight

By some adventurers it was told—

The Pikes Peak region was a land of gold.

From East to West from North to South

Was heralded from mouth to mouth.

Some like the writer then were young

But listened open-mouthed to praises sung.

All who could do so their possessions sold

And madly started for the land of gold.

The legend on their "scholars" was not in God

We trust.

But ran in letters bold "Pikes Peak or Bust."

With many weeks of toil the time was passed.

The horses sought they reached at last.

And now with many sighs and often tears

Commenced the toil that they endured for years.

But struggled on from sun to sun

Till in July Eighteen Seventy-one.

Then remarks just at this stage—

The railroad came—the narrow gauge—

A town laid out with room to spread.

Our General Palmer at its head.

Its growth was slow for many years.

But built but built with doubts and fears.

Full thirty years had passed since it was told

The Pikes Peak region was a land of gold.

And now our fortunes you did seek

To what is known as Cripple Creek.

The Springs leaped forward with a bound.

There was no doubt gold had been found.

Since then we've had no doubts of fears.

But kept on growing with the passing years.

Till now from all the nation rings

The praises of our Colorado Springs.

Business District in the Early Days Centered Around Cascade Avenue and Huerfano Street Pioneer Business Men Now Forgotten Rapid Growth of the Town Trade Diverted From Denver.

least the distances so appeared to me at that time.

We had customers who came long distances. From the east 75 to 100 miles; from the north as far as Greenland station on the D. & R. G. From the south as far as Wigwam and Pinon and from the west as far as the Arkansas river and in some instances still farther.

I found a town one and a half years old and claiming some 1,500 population and with what appeared to me a very uncertain future.

However, health conditions seemed favorable and, on my return to Wisconsin in April, I so reported to my father who decided to come to Colorado, where the family arrived on June 30, 1873. After a residence of two or three months in Denver my father's health had so improved that we began looking for a location for a hardware business.

We finally decided on Colorado Springs and, in August, 1873, I began opening a stock of hardware in a building owned by S. C. Foote on the corner of Huerfano and Cascade avenues.

The business houses of the town were, at that time, considerably scattered. Opposite us, north, on Cascade avenue, was a grocery store kept by E. D. Dithridge. Further north in the same block was the store of True & Sutton. Near them was the jewelry store of William Thurnburg and north of Thurnburg's store was the Colorado Springs Hotel on the corner of Pikes Peak and Cascade avenues. In the next block, north, on Cascade avenue, was Sanders Livery stable and near it, as I remember, was the first bank of this city, known as the William B. Young & Co. bank, while further north on the corner of Kiowa and Cascade was the Mountain House, built and owned by Mr. George H. Stewart, who also owned the corner where the city hall now stands and who afterwards was interested in organizing the first national bank of Colorado Springs and, I believe, was the first president of that bank.

Among other business houses at that date were Goodrich & True on the corner where now stands the Robbins clothing store. The Peoples banks on the corner where now stands the Colorado Savings bank and owned and managed by the late James H. B. McFerran, the father of the very active and worthy president of this Pioneer society. The building now known as the City Drug store on the corner of Huerfano and Tejon, was then a drug store occupied by Burnham, Donovan & Clutter. South of this store and slightly removed from the street were the general offices of the Denver and Rio Grande railway, housed in several one story buildings.

BUSINESS IN THE EARLY DAYS

Among the business men then engaged in business on Tejon street were Mr. George H. Sweet in the hay and grain trade. Mrs. Giltner had a shoe store about where Kaufman's store now stands. Mr. O. T. Baker, the pioneer dry goods merchant of this city, was located in his own building where the Globe Clothing store now stands, while almost directly opposite was the butcher shop of Mr. Freeman. Wilson and Wood were in the hardware business at what is now No. 17 South Tejon street.

On the corner where the El Paso bank now stands was a building then occupied as a laundry and boarding house and which, afterwards became Colorado Springs' first saloon. Taylor Brothers had a drug store where the Johnson Jewelry company's store now stands and opposite, on a portion of the ground now occupied by the Burns Opera house, was a livery stable kept by Wilson brothers. Interspersed on other lots adjoining these business houses were portable houses, and what were termed "colony shanties," occupied as residences.

The Gazette, then known as the Out West, occupied the ground floor of the building on Tejon street opposite the Robbins clothing store, the upper floor of this building serving as town hall, school room, church and other purposes of a hall.

The country tributary to Colorado Springs, though sparsely settled, was quite extensive, although the city was not then in existence.

When Sir John French was in command of the cavalry at Canterbury he chanced one day to meet a rather slouching young recruit.

"Tell me, lad," said the new chief of the general staff, "does this city belong to you?"

The military fledgling saluted and blushing replied:

"No sir."

"Never mind," said French genially, "Straighten yourself up, pull yourself together and look as though you belonged to this city."

We think these hard-worked quotations have a right to at least an eight-hour day.

Heavens, yes! I consider them a most excellent means of ridding the country of an undesirable element.

While excavating near these baths, treasures were found, one is a Venus with arms upraised. Only the head and some small fragments remain, but they are enough to show that it was a great masterpiece and the bath probably was dedicated to her.

EQUITY FOR SALE

my equity in a practically new cottage of 5 large rooms, cellar, large closets, built-in, leaded glass side-board; first quality plumbing of porcelain and nickel plate, front porch, screen porch, glass doors, large, oval plate glass front door. The house is modern except heat, and is one of the best built cottages in the city. I built this place for a home, less than three years ago, using none but the best of material. There are two full lots; nice, new sun coop for chickens, new coal house, etc. Only 1 block from the gate-line. This is a most attractive home in fine shape, and has all modern conveniences. Coal, gas ranges, electric lights, fine bath, large sleeping porch, good furnace, complete laundry. You can't heat this, no matter where you look. Let us show it to you and submit offer.

Cripple Creek Mines

EXPECT MARCH WILL SHOW HIGH TONNAGE

CRIPPLE CREEK, March 15.—The moving of ore by team on the hills during the last two days has been out of order on account of the heavy snow, but it is expected that there will be an extra heavy tonnage sent out which has been accumulating during that time. The surface workings have been shut down for a day or so and the rock ordinarily leaving dump leases on Bull Hill has been stopped for the time being.

The weather has in no other manner retarded the operations of the mines of the district but on the other hand has actually served to bring about increased operations in the larger mines.

The output for the first half of this month has been up to all expectations and indications are that March will show one of the largest outputs of the year, inasmuch as the tonnage to date has been very satisfactory while the grade of ore has been higher than usual.

The El Paso mine has materially increased the production of ore, since the second shaft has been started in operation. The first shipments from the main Beacon Hill Ajax vein, just discovered on the 100-foot level of the Nichols shaft, have been settled for, showing that the ore is as good as was ever thought for in that it will average about four ounces or $80 to the ton. This is one of the latest ore discoveries reported, which means a great deal not only to the El Paso mine but to the district affix.

In addition to the ore which is sent to the mills and smelters of the valley for final reduction there is also being treated in the district many hundred tons of low grade ore. The tonnage handled by the plants of this camp is every month increasing while the profits made by the mill owners apparently are likewise increased.

The smaller plants which are working the dungs have experienced a little difficulty on account of frozen dungs, but this has not been of such seriousness as to materially curtail the tonnage handled by any one of these mills treating dump rock.

CRIPPLE CREEK, March 15.—Late reports from the C. K. & N. mine indicate that the new ore discovery reported recently is improving as it is developed.

Two cars have been sent from this strike which is said to be on the new or bottom level and has demonstrated that the ore is of good smelting grade.

It appears there is a large body of ore coming in in increasing numbers.

More inquiry is reported for building material. Among contracts just closed is one for 3,000 tons of structural steel for Oakland, Cal., and 1,500 tons for Buffalo.

The building commission of South Norwalk, Conn., is negotiating for a rolling lift bridge requiring about 400 tons of steel. The Pennsylvania railroad wants steel for heavy bridge work.

Several agricultural implement makers have placed large contracts in soft steel bars for 1913-14 delivery. The soft demand for pig iron is causing some forced selling at a shade under the market.

C. K. & N. STRIKE SHOWS EXTENSIVE ORE BODY

CRIPPLE CREEK, March 15.—Late reports from the C. K. & N. mine indicate that the new ore discovery reported recently is improving as it is developed.

Two cars have been sent from this strike which is said to be on the new or bottom level and has demonstrated that the ore is of good smelting grade.

It appears there is a large body of ore coming in in increasing numbers.

Iron and Steel

NEW YORK March 15.—Finished steel orders are numerous and the tone of the market is strong. Prospects of not getting supplied until way into the fall does not deter buyers. Those who want quick delivery are willing apparently to pay stiff premium for it.

Argentina has placed orders for 7,500 tons of rails and northwestern roads have bought 45,000 tons of Bessemer, in some cases paying a premium for early delivery.

Car builders continue to place contracts. The Pennsylvania has just completed contracts for 100 passenger, 35 refrigerator and 25 baggage cars, 72 steel coaches and 20 combination cars. The Baltimore & Ohio is in the market for 4,000 freight cars and the Boston & Maine for 5,000.

The Pennsylvania placed a contract for 144 heavy freight locomotives with the Baldwin at an approximate cost of $35,000. The Baldwins have also closed a contract with the Missouri Pacific for five locomotives, and the Western Indiana is getting five switching engines from the American Locomotive company. The Canadian Pacific is in the market for 29 locomotives and the Seaboard Air Line for 38.

While new work in finished steel is being closed slowly, specifications are coming in in increasing numbers.

CRIPPLE CREEK, March 15.—The weather has in no other manner retarded the operations of the mines of the district but on the other hand has actually served to bring about increased operations in the larger mines.

The output for the first half of this month has been up to all expectations and indications are that March will show one of the largest outputs of the year, inasmuch as the tonnage to date has been very satisfactory while the grade of ore has been higher than usual.

The El Paso mine has materially increased the production of ore, since the second shaft has been started in operation. The first shipments from the main Beacon Hill Ajax vein, just discovered on the 100-foot level of the Nichols shaft, have been settled for, showing that the ore is as good as was ever thought for in that it will average about four ounces or $80 to the ton. This is one of the latest ore discoveries reported, which means a great deal not only to the El Paso mine but to the district affix.

It appears there is a large body of ore coming in in increasing numbers.

Financial Review

NEW YORK March 15.—The stringency in the Berlin money market maintained its draggy effect on all financial markets this week and continued to restrain the influences of a number of favorable developments.

The latter were sufficiently active to induce large caving of short lines of stocks. Operations of a more positive kind are withheld to await a clearer prospect of the April settlements at Berlin. That center made large additional regulations for gold to London and New York, the result being to distribute the strain to the benefit of Berlin and at the expense of the other points.

The heavy outgo of gold from New York came after shipments in January and February were larger than ever for those months. The surplus reserve fell to a low point and the inevitable tightening of money rates has followed. The effect was transmitted to other domestic money markets.

MR. DUNNING HAS AGREED NOT TO SING

How Jeancon Got Idea of "The Isle of Kal-to-Kee"

"The Isle of Kal-to-Kee," the mythical land of mirth and mirth, was created in precisely four hours in a Sunday afternoon in Colorado Springs. But the elements of lyrical atmosphere and book ground-work have been forming for several months, awaiting the inspirational moment for assembly by the author, J. Alard Jeancon.

In the beginning, there was a ranch near Palmer Lake owned and occupied by a motherly old woman and her son. This was the scene and these were the hosts of a summer vacation for Mr. Jeancon. Into their presence one day from the land of make-believe came Annie Gilhooley, future queen of "Kal-to-Kee."

While it must be admitted that Annie's beauty is not of a type which did not make them, the "hired man" alone would class her as a "queen," however, violated the canons of or drive men to drink, despair and doom, still, she is preeminent in other qualifications demanded of a ruler—an autocrat of an extreme type whose will is law; whose slightest whim must be obeyed, and before whose mandate the bravest stand in awe—for is she not president of the "Hired Girls Union"? Fear stalks before her—she is royal potentate of the Amalgamated Order of Knockers!

But, to return to the ranch, Annie appeared in imaginative jest, impersonated by Mr. Jeancon, who enacted the role of cook, and therefore, boss. The son, as the other principal in the jesting dialogue, portrayed the role of "hired man." For the comfort of the other occupants of the ranch, as well as for the information of the readers, it should be stated that "Annie" merely enacted the roles, staged by really working, its tell in love with it all hired men fell in love, and Miss Gilhooley was cold and allowed no sparkling except from the kitchen stove.

"I am the boss," said Annie, "and that's all there are to it."

No one disputed her, not even the modest hired man.

The story grew, and after Mr. Jeancon left, he wrote bits of verse to his kindly hostess at the ranch and immediately the romance of the Isle of Kal-to-Kee was born. True to the fragments of verse and disjointed and the strains of rhyme, that fitted with each rhyme.

Then one day Mr. Jeancon knew that there was some in the creation of the imaginary Isle, with its romantic settings, and the gathering together of the two persons together, who were to constitute its whimsical occupants. In four hours he completed his task, and the Isle of Kal-to-Kee stood forth as a finished handiwork in the traditional seals of imaginative genius.

The Isle of Kal-to-Kee is proclaimed as a "Nightmare" in a prologue and two acts. It abounds with tuneful music and witty dialogue, is populated with merrymakers, and the nightmare, if any, is in consequence of a scratch of the best of sparkling humor and appealing mirth.

This is not Mr. Jeancon's initial effort in the realm of musical comedy. A previous production of his, "The Summer Girl," was staged by Mr. Jeancon and his brother, Otto Jeancon, in several of the larger cities of the southwest about a year ago, with brilliant success. The experience acquired in the presentation of his former work has proved of incalculable value in putting on "The Isle of Kal-to-Kee," giving it a finish and polish of artistic craftsmanship.

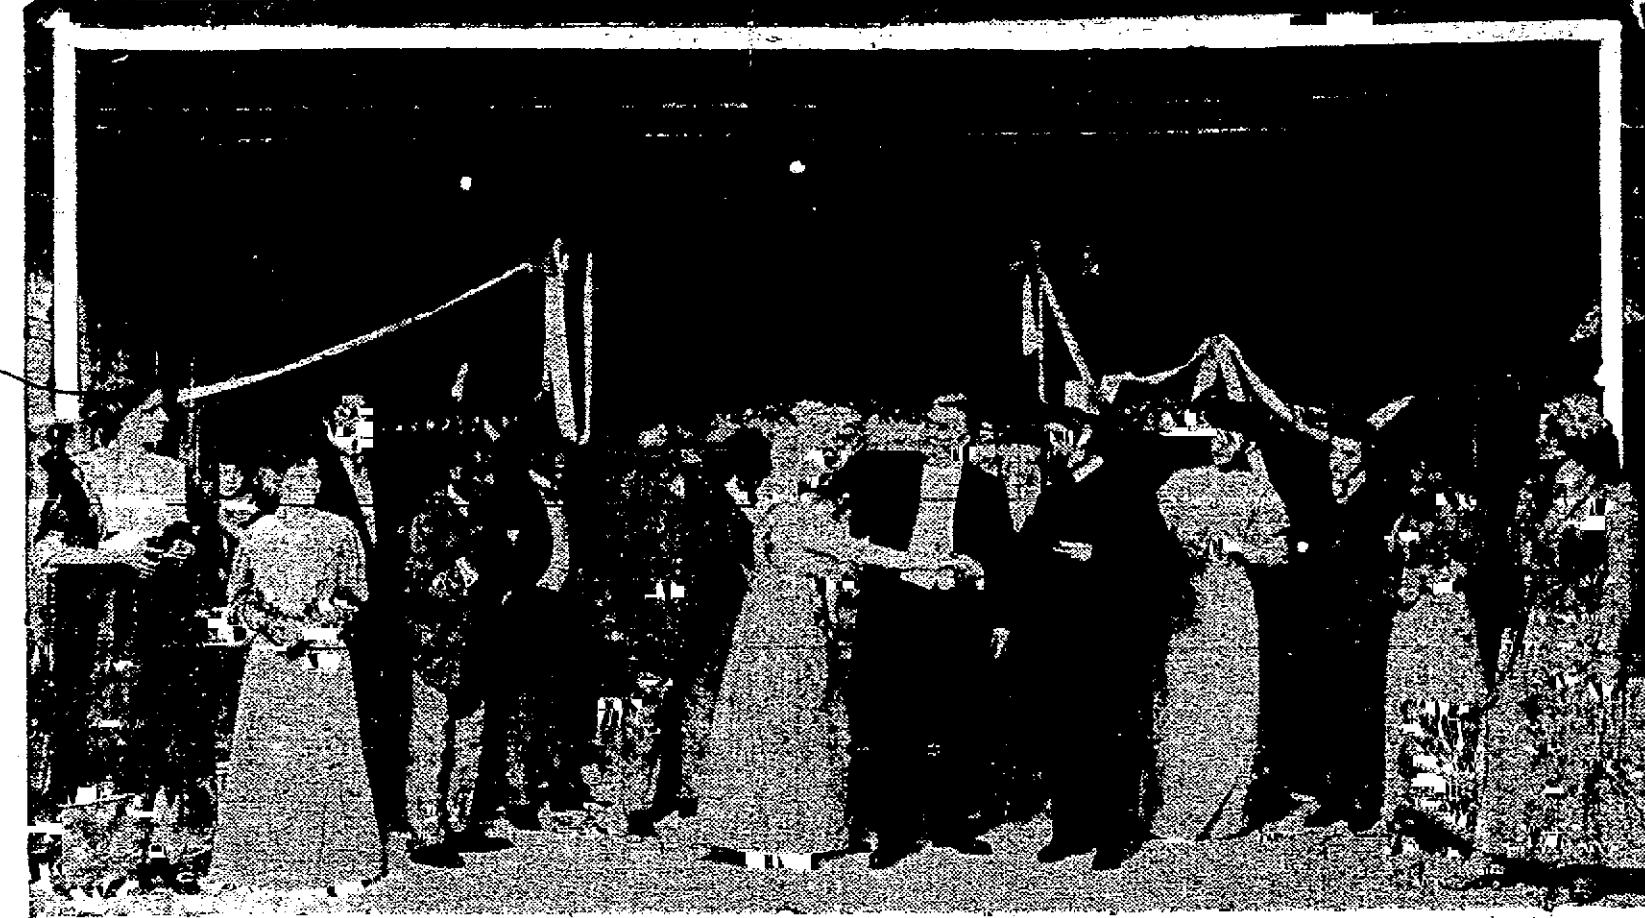

Besides being a composer of unusual ability and a musician of recognized worth and a writer of high attainments, Mr. Jeancon is distinguished in the field of science. His researches among the Indian and Cliff Dweller ruins in the western states have attracted wide attention, and his monographs on the prehistoric southwest are considered authoritative.

He is a member of many distinguished scientific bodies, among them the Archaeological Institute of America, the National Geographic Society and others. For four years he was president of the International Society of Archaeologists, and is an honored member of that exclusive scientific body, the Records of the Past.

Because he is a member of the Colorado Springs Lodge of Elks, which he joined in 1896, he chose this city for the initial presentation of "The Isle of Kal-to-Kee," after refusing several other attractive offers from cities where he had previously staged shows.

"The Isle of Kal-to-Kee" is a pretentious production, requiring nearly a hundred persons and elaborate scenic settings. Pending the choice of 300 and the score or more of principals, the Elks band and orchestra will assist in the musical interpretation.

"The Isle of Kal-to-Kee" will be presented at The Burns' theater Thursday and Friday evenings, March 27 and 28. The proceeds of the performances will go to the elementary fund of Colorado Springs Lodge No. 309, B. P. O. E.

SCENE FROM "EXCUSE ME," HENRY W. SAVAGE'S FUNNY PULLMAN CAR FARCE AT GRAND OPERA HOUSE, MONDAY, MARCH 24TH.

"Naughty Marietta" Tomorrow

"Naughty Marietta," a comic opera, lightful little star—were in the depths in two acts by Victor Herbert and Rita Johnson Young, come to the Grand Opera House tomorrow night under the management of Oscar Hammerstein. Florence Websky, young American prima donna soprano, with a phenomenal record as "Naughty Marietta" to her credit, is the star.

Prima donnas have driven many a theatrical manager to distraction and their tantrums, their peevishness, their egotism, their self-sufficiency and their obscurerades in general are well known as to need no further comment. Such is the average prima donna. Florence Websky, the prima donna of "Naughty Marietta," company is anything else. In fact, she is unlike most prima donna ladies, for she possesses a most amiable disposition, doesn't even know the meaning of the word conceit and is about as winsome and charming a young lady as one would meet in a garden of modern angels.

And her personality is that of a six-year-old kid. She is chuck full of innocence and could be justly classed as a hoyden tom-boy, a terror to dignity, life and everything else. "It is to laugh," she insists, the most wonderful epigram in the world is "laugh and the world laughs with you; weep and the world gives you the laugh"; so, with such an idea of things, it is easy to realize how she carries on during rehearsals.

While the long and arduous rehearsals of "Naughty Marietta" were in progress, everybody—excepting the de-

Rose Stahl in "Maggie Pepper"

Miss Rose Stahl in her latest success

"Maggie Pepper," will be the attraction at the Grand Opera House Tuesday, March 25th, and it give promise of providing one of the most interesting events of the theatrical season.

The play was written by Charles Klein and tells the story of a girl of the department stores. It is typically

American and again in this instance

Mr. Klein has demonstrated as before in "The Lion and the Mouse" and

"The Third Deck," that there is no newsworthy in these United States with a greater facility for taking the life

we live and its daily problems and putting them upon the stage with telling force. The Henry W. Harris' estate under whose management Miss

Stahl will appear has surrounded her with an excellent company and every part will be played for its full value.

Mr. Klein reckons "Maggie Pepper"

among his best plays and Miss Stahl brings to the interpretation of the character the best art she has yet offered our playgoers. From the first performance the play was reckoned as an assured success, so there is no reason why "Maggie Pepper" should not be a definitely popular hit and success with peppy English—otherwise slang. She is a saleswoman in a New York department store. From a cash girl she gradually rises to be assistant buyer. By a trick of fate she is made head buyer, confidential adviser and general business head of the concern.

But it is not altogether fair to lay this success of the girl to fate, for her keen business sense and understanding of business conditions were really the reasons thereof. Prosperity comes to the store under her direction, then the true woman awakens within her—she is in love with her employer, but her love is too true, too honest to let him sacrifice himself for her. How she comes to realize that true love can do no wrong is one of the big thrills of the play.

Throughout "Maggie Pepper" runs that delightfully breezy slang that has endeared Miss Stahl to audiences throughout America. But there is much of pathos in the three acts and in these emotional scenes Miss Stahl is powerful and effective as in the lighter lines she is amusing. The play is not only clever but it is elaborately produced and the typical characters which appear in it may be found transacting business on every work day in the department stores of the land, be they big or little. Charles Klein's play is full of the situations and lines which win ready laughter, the laughter which comes spontaneously, because of the human, rather than the forced interest they bear. The supporting company is one of unusual excellence. The star herself sets a high standard of acting and it is the greatest praise to state that no member of the organization falls below her standard at any point in the performance.

Willis P. Sweatman in "Excuse Me"

Local demonstration of the excellent quality of "Excuse Me," a farce by Rupert Hughes, will be given by Henry W. Savage at the Grand Opera House Monday, March 24, with as brilliant a company of comedians as ever has been assembled in one organization. Headed by Willis P. Sweatman, in his original role of the porter, Every man, woman and youth who sees "Excuse Me" will be tied up in knots of merriment.

The play is farce but it is not a knock-about; horseplay, hodgepodge of nonsense. On the contrary its humor and comedy are clever, sane and plausible. There is a play in "Excuse Me." What happens in the dramatic representation might actually happen. In comic episodes might readily come upon just such travelers as those who might really be making a trip in the Pullman cars of an Overland Limited express. It is all tremendously funny adventures, misadventures and adventures, and it is fun that is quite possible both in episode and in persons. It is a laugh every minute and the fact "Excuse Me" is probable, wherein the persons in the audience might well imagine themselves passengers on a flying express. More things happen on this trip than on any other in the history of railroads travel and everything in "Excuse Me" is probable, wherein the persons in the audience might well be ashamed they'll have to say "Excuse me" when they're asked about their failure to enjoy the jolliest, merriest, cleverest and best farce ever.

SCENE FROM ACT I. OF "MAGGIE PEPPERS," IN WHICH ROSE STAHL APPEARS AT THE GRAND OPERA HOUSE TUESDAY, MARCH 25TH.

Mr. Jeancon, who wrote both the books and lyrics, as well as the score of the musical comedy, "The Isle of Kal-to-Kee," which is to be presented by the Colorado Springs Lodge of Elks at the Burns theater, Thursday and Friday evenings, March 27 and 28, is not only a musician of ability, but is distinguished in the scientific world, for his researches among the Indian and Cliff Dweller ruins of the southwest, and was formerly president of the International Society of Archaeologists. He is a member of Colorado Springs Lodge No. 309, B. P. O. E., joining in 1896, and it is due to this fact that Colorado Springs audience are to have the first chance to hear "The Isle of Kal-to-Kee." Photo by Bingham.

It's a strong, healthy, aromatic tea, a messy and troublesome task of course, a little you can certainly do it in the ready-to-use "W.M. Weller's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." Some druggists in this country are themselves big users of this tea, so insist you want

OLNEY HAS DECLINED AMBASSADORIAL POST

"Family Reasons" Given for His Inability to Go to Court of St. James

WASHINGTON, March 15.—President Wilson received with regret today a letter from Richard Olney, ambassador to London, secretary of state under President Cleveland, declining the friendly reasons, the offer of the post of United States ambassador to Great Britain.

Olney and his family are anxious to fill that post as quickly as possible, the president probably will make an appointment within a few days, but it was said he had not decided upon any individual. He failed to fill this important post because he felt his other diplomatic position, and is said to favor a man of dignity as well as diplomatic reputation.

Though no names came forward yesterday, it was thought the president might choose a man hitherto untried for other European posts, these include David R. Francis of Missouri, Thomas Nelson Page of Virginia, Augustus Thomas of New York, Judge George Gray of Delaware, William Church Osborn of New York, and Edwin A. Alderman, president of the University of Virginia.

Journalists Draw Lots to Select a Duelist

PARIS, March 15.—President Poincaré has modernized the stables of the Elysee.

He has come to the conclusion that in these days of motorcars, there is no sense in spending the taxpayers' money on the upkeep of horses, old-fashioned carriages, and expensive coaches.

He has given orders for the sale of all the horses except four in the stables of the Elysee; has dismissed the head coachman Traude, who on one occasion drove the presidential carriage with outriders and two other coaches and stable hands.

The four horses which are to be kept will very rarely be used by M. Poincaré himself. They are for his wife's pleasure principally. It is not impossible that Mme. Poincaré may ride in the Elysée as an encouragement to Paris society not to be riding drop out of fashion.

AUTOMOBILES AND THE HIGH SCHOOL

The automobile industry needs skilled workers, and boys who are interested in being skilled automobile workers need the high school. That's the basis of the school and shop plan now in effect in Lansing, Mich., as reported to the United States Bureau of Education. In Lansing, the high school and the automobile industry of the city cooperate in educating boys who wish to go beyond the eighth grade in school, but need something different from the usual academic curriculum.

Boys in the industrial-cooperative course spend the first year wholly in school. After that they divide their time equally between school and shop, working one week at school and the next week in the automobile or gas engine shop, or wherever they are employed. Thus the preliminary year this June, will go to work as apprentices in Lansing manufacturing plants they will have two weeks' vacation during the summer, and in the fall they will begin the weekly alternating plan. They are paid for their work, of course.

The object of the plan, according to Superintendent Cummings, who initiated it after observing the work at Pittsburgh, Mass., is not only to provide a rational course of study for pupils, who desire special preparation for a trade, but also to serve a purpose in the performance of the school's duty to the industries and to society.

The instructor in charge of the industrial-cooperative course is an admirable example of the new kind of school man required for vocational education. He is well educated, but at the same time he is a man of practical training and experience. Not only did he serve at his trade for several years, but he has had experience in teaching as well. It is not often that the schools can avail themselves of vocational instructors of this double qualification, and in this respect Lansing

WILL PRES. WILSON BE A PROGRESSIVE?

Life-Long Record Indicates
Differently, But Nation
Awaits Results

WASHINGTON, March 15.—President Wilson has been in office hardly long enough as yet to enable him to give any definite line upon the course his administration will follow. There is no doubt that the general sentiment towards his administration is one of good will and hopeful expectancy. There is a widespread recognition of the fact that the task before him is of colossal proportions. He knows that he comes into his high office as the choice of a decided minority of the voters of the country. Moreover, he comes into office proclaiming himself a progressive, uttering progressive sentiments and declaring his intention to surround himself with progressives only, but with a consistent and nearly life-long record of action and utterance diametrically opposite to his more recent profession.

The first question, therefore, to which the expectant country demands response is as to the genuineness of his conversion to progressivism. Answer in part to that question is naturally sought in the character of the men he has chosen as his cabinet advisors. As far as this selection affords answer to the question, it is favorable. He has placed Mr. Bryan at the head of his cabinet. If Mr. Bryan's activities in the administration are to be limited to the state department only, his selection will have no special force in determining the progressive or nonprogressive character of the administration, for the work of the state department bears but slightly upon domestic affairs. It is the general impression, however, that Mr. Bryan's influence will be felt outside the restricted limits of his own department.

Conservation is Great Question.
The departments whose conduct will furnish the best line upon the true purpose of the administration are those of Justice, the treasury and the interior, with the last named probably most important in this respect. For it is in the interior department that the great conservation questions come up constantly on which there is no possibility of avoiding the issue. The line between progressivism and reaction is more sharply drawn on these conservation questions than on any other. There is no middle ground. Decisions there must be either progressive or reactionary.

Mr. Wilson is fortunate in having the support and service of Franklin K. Lane in the interior department. Mr. Lane, as a member of the interstate commerce commission, accomplished more than all others to bring that commission to the high state of efficiency which it has attained and to make it fulfill so largely as it does the popular ideal of what it should be. Mr. Lane has already evidenced strong sympathy with progressive principles and there is substantial reason for expecting him to hew sharply to the line in his work in the interior department. The president is also fortunate in his selection of Mr. McRae as attorney general and of Mr. McAdoo for the treasury department. The department of justice, like that of the interior, meets problems the solution of which imperatively demands a practical application of progressive principles. The genuine progressives of the country will watch this department eagerly for developments—especially in regard to dealing with trusts and corporations—that will show conclusively whether the administration purposes to take a genuinely progressive-national attitude toward the trust problem, or to be content with a pseudo-progressive but really reactionary state-right course.

The course of the treasury department, and that of the department of commerce as well, also will be watched eagerly for developments that may furnish in part an answer to this same question.

These are questions the answers to which can be found only in the acts of the administration. Such preliminary indications as there are tend to justify the hope that the answer when given will be favorable.

is considered particularly fortunate. The work is already proving its importance, in the opinion of Superintendent Cummings. He points to the significant case of two boys, who, after having made object failures in the regular high-school work the year before, are successful leaders in the work of the industrial department.

MAKING SPONGES GROW

From St. Nicholas.

Biscayne Bay, Sugarloaf Key, Anclote Keys and Key West, on the Florida coast, are the principal places in this country where experiments in sponge culture have been made. The various methods are as follows: "Seed" sponges are cut into small pieces, and, after having been attached by wire or spindle to regular or triangular cement blocks, are dropped or lowered (depending upon the depth) to rest on the ocean bottom, where they remain for a year or two until they reach a size proper for commercial purposes. They are then taken by hook, when new cuttings are attached, and the cement blocks let down again.

Another method was to string them on a wire held horizontal by stakes driven in the bottom. In doing this, however, various difficulties arose. The sponges became loose and rotated on the wire, enlarging the hole made through them, and the action of the salt water corroded and destroyed the wire until, after many trials and experiments, a lead wire with a copper core was successfully used.

THAT FAITH THAT WINS

If you have found a grain of mustard seed, you shall say, "Brother, this is in my hand." Remove it, for wonder! It is too small to move, and nothing shall be impossible to you.

There are times when despair comes to every sincere soul who longs to see the dawning of the day of social justice. There are times when it appears that the world is going from bad to worse. We look about us sometimes and it seems as if everywhere the forces of evil are triumphant.

Girls are being driven to wrong by low wages. Whole communities are given over to sordid amusements without thought of higher things. The grip of the great interests upon the nation is tightening. The hold of the church upon the people is becoming loosened. Divorce is never so common, the varieties of it finally it appears, are being weakened.

But it is only to the man of little faith that despair comes. If girls are being led astray, yet never before in all the world was there a fight so strongly organized against the age-old sin of organized prostitution. And every where the man is being voiced that all workers men as well as women must be paid a living wage.

If in some communities it appears that all the people care for is amusement yet on the other hand never was good reading so widely diffused as at present, never were the people so well informed, never was there so great a demand for the good in music, in painting, in all the arts and literature.

If the big interests are tightening their hold, yet the powers of the people who must in the end oppose these interests in final battle are likewise being strengthened. In all the history of the world there was never so close an approximation to real democracy in any great nation as there is today in the United States. The people are learning their power, they are testing their weapons.

If the church is losing in one direction, it is gaining in another. If it is losing something of its other-worldliness, something of its attractiveness as a place of worship, it is gaining in its knowledge and ability to go out into the world and serve the world. And the primary purpose for which Christ founded the church was service, not worship.

Even the divorce evil may not be entirely hopeless. Unquestionably there is a change in family relations taking place. But much of that is due to the new conception of woman's duty and her place in the family. She was forced to submit to her husband in all things in the old days, now she demands justice.

Our very moral standards are changing. There has come into business, into politics, into religion, a new spirit. It has not yet conquered, but everywhere it is at work, like the leaven in the loaf.

Then why despair? To the man or the woman who is really a believer in Christ there can be no such thing. Such an one looks beyond the present into the future. He knows God's hand is as constantly at work today, and as surely at work as it has been since the far-off day when light first dawned. He looks back, and sees how gradually but surely the world has gone forward, he looks ahead, and knows that the same forces are still at work in the same direction.

His faith may be but as a grain of mustard seed, yet if he works in that faith it grows. And the thing he sets out to do he does.

Christendom is celebrating today the centenary of the birth of David Livingstone. What that knows even a little of that man's life can doubt? Alone he set out to conquer Africa; to make the dark continent light. When he began his work, something over half a century ago, Africa was what it had been for ages. Except along the coast the light had never penetrated.

But Livingstone's faith could see but one thing, and that a redeemed, an enlightened, a Christianized Africa. He died, of course, before his vision had been realized. It has not yet been realized. But what comparison is there between the Africa of today and the Africa of a century ago?

Our problems are different from the problems Livingstone faced. But what one man's dogged faith accomplished in opening Africa to civilization an equal faith can accomplish in the settlement of our problem. It is only despair that is ever beaten, faith always triumphs.

THE ROBINSON DIVORCE BILL

LAST Friday the House passed on second reading the excellent divorce bill introduced by Senator William C. Robinson of El Paso County. It seems likely that the measure will become a law, and if so the probable effect will be a pronounced improvement in the conditions under which divorces are granted in this state.

The most important provision of the Robinson bill is the requirement that the final decree of divorce shall not be entered until after the expiration of one year from the date of the judgment. This means that neither party to a suit in which a verdict of divorce has been rendered can marry again within a year, either in Colorado or elsewhere, without committing bigamy for they are not actually divorced until the final decree is entered. Under the present law a divorced person can easily circumvent the one-year restriction by going to another state to be remarried, for as soon as the decree is signed they are legally separated at least in the eyes of the law elsewhere.

The Robinson bill is not an ideal measure but the practical difficulties in the way of attaining the ideal in divorce reform are so great that it probably will be a long time before they are removed. However the bill is a long step forward and should by all means be enacted.

ROADMONEY FOR EL PASO COUNTY

ACCORDING to Mr. Harry Hutchinson, former county commissioner who has been working in Denver in behalf of the new Highway Commission law, El Paso county's share of the fund for next year will be about $20,000. Approximately $800,000 is immediately available for the road fund.

This is only a beginning, and other generous sums may be expected annually and in the other part of the state can they be used to better advantage. El Paso County has done pioneer work with its own money in the good roads movement, and richly deserves generous aid from the state.

FROM OTHER PENS

ONE IS ENOUGH

From the New York Tribune

Mr. Bryan has explained that his remarks to the employees of the state department about tenure were largely "jocose." They were taken very seriously in some quarters and started a good deal of wild-eyed speculation.

The new secretary of state has never been known as a master of the facetious, and he is too old to plunge rashly into that field now. Humorists have to be caught young. Besides the new regime is already equipped with a high export. The Hon. Champ Clark whose "joke" about the annexation of Canada echoed around the continent a couple of years ago, has a humorist in Democratic higher councils is certainly enough.

AMBIVOLUS.

From the New York Tribune

The need of clarifying the single six-year term amendment now pending in the house of representatives is emphasized by what the senate did last week when it had a chance to say explicitly that the extension of the term was not intended to apply to a president in office at the time of ratification. There are men who hold that an amendment of this sort cannot be retroactive in effect changing the terms of the four-year commission given to a president by the voters. But there are others who say that approval of the pending amendment would forthwith modify all existing laws and constitutional requirements. They would probably cite as sustaining their view of the case the senate's refusal to insert in the amendment an explanation that it was not meant to extend the term of a president by the voters. But there are others who say that the senate for reasons of its own did not want to be too explicit. It rejected Mr. Sutherland's proviso by a vote of 23 to 29, just as it had defeated every earlier attempt to modify the phrasing approved by the senate committee on judiciary.

ROOSEVELT AT HARVARD

From the Kansas City Star

Writing of his college course at Harvard in his autobiographical article in the current issue of the Outlook, Colonel Roosevelt remarks that he thoroughly enjoyed his college experience and was sure it did him good. But this good, he says, was "only in the general effect of the course. There was very little in my actual studies" he adds, which helped me in after life."

That was 30 years ago and things have changed for the better since that time. The curricula have become rich and varied and a young man or woman who cannot pick out studies that will count in after life isn't living up to the opportunities offered in the better colleges.

But in the primary and secondary schools the teachers recognize that there is still a wide gap between studies and outside life. A proof of this is the fact that only the interest fraction of the pupils who enter the graded schools go on through the high school. In some cases necessity sends them to work. But careful investigation has shown that lack of interest in studies, a failure to see that they have any bearing on the problem of earning a living, is a powerful factor.

It is hard to keep the curricula adjusted to the changing needs of the pupils. Information on Non-English town government is much more accessible than information on how Kansas City and Jackson county are governed. The board of education of Kansas City in common with education boards everywhere is undertaking radical changes in order to bring its courses of study into connection with the practical side of life. But only a thinking so far has been made in carrying out this deal.

A GUEST OF GEORGIA

From the Philadelphia Inquirer

William H. Taft is the guest of a guest of Georgia under very peculiar circumstances. He is well known and well beloved in a section where Republicans do not exist but where character counts. Invited to spend a few weeks of rest in the unbragorous recesses of the Empire state of the south Mr. Taft will have a pleasant time of it. He can play golf or may talk and he may, but he is sure to be among friends. This is a fine exhibition of the universality of friendship.

Mr. Taft leaves office with a great goodwill behind him that has never been the case in the memory of living men. He has done his best, his best has been the best that man could do. He has been as utterly devoid of partisanship, sectionalism or meanness as is likely to where in man. He visits on invitation those who voted against him yet shows love and admiration.

The plain truth is that Mr. Taft is one of those men so far above the average that he commands the admiration of all. The worst tickes best liked and least sure of presidents has a place in the hearts of the American people which office cannot bestow.

PROFITABLE BABY SHOWS

From the New York Sun

The conventional baby show as a general rule and other public gatherings are repugnant to people of refinement because it has become a sensational mode of advertisement rather than a means of propaganda for beauty and its concomitant health. The Woman's Home Companion for March describes a novel baby show which must produce the most beneficial results.

Contrary to the beauty shows in which judgment is pronounced under the influence of sentiment or caprice or favoritism the new type of baby show is a contest for points of physical perfection to be determined by scientific tests that are infallible and infallibly submit to the personal equation.

The state of Iowa which is renowned for its high grade of farm products and animal and vegetable has initiated a method of improving the highest and most valuable product the baby under the energetic guidance of two capable women Mrs. Mary T. Watts and Dr. Margaret V. Clark. In this contest the height weight or circumference of chest and abdomen, symmetry, quality of skin muscles, fat, size, length, circumference, etc. of head, shape of face, and palate, condition of teeth and tonsils are tested and in older children the disposition, alertness of attention and other physiological tests are added. The applicants were provided with blanks stating a description of age mode of feeding and giving a brief history. The judges were physicians who were taught to count points, so far as indicated healthily they were. It is based on a standardization of points based upon the examination.

It is true that in the past decade and a half the cost of living has actually gone up at least one-half. Of course wages and salaries have likewise increased to some extent but in proportion to the higher cost of living.

needs of every member of the family. It is pleasant-tasting, mild and non-griping. Unlike harsh cathartics, it contains mineral waters, pills and similar things. They have temporary value in some cases, it is true, but the good effect is soon lost, and the more you take of them the less effective they become.

A physician or purgative is seldom necessary, and much better and more permanent results can be obtained by using a scientific remedy like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup-Pepsin. It does not hide behind a high-sounding name, but if what it is represented to be, a mild laxative medicine. It is so mild that thousands of mothers give it to tiny infants, and yet it is $3 compounded, and contains such definite ingredients that it will have equally good effect when used by a person suffering from the worst chronic constipation. In fact, among the greatest endorsers of Syrup-Pepsin are elderly people who have suffered for years and found nothing to benefit them until they took Syrup-Pepsin.

It is a fact that millions of families have Syrup-Pepsin constantly in the house, homes like those of Mrs. G. B. Pruitt, Berea, Ky., who used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup-Pepsin as a laxative tonic. Mrs. Pruitt writes that it so strengthened and relieved her system that she was quickly relieved of a severe cough which had troubled her for months. The special value of this grand laxative tonic is that it is suited to the sample bottle will be mailed you.

Thomas Jefferson Was the First President Washington School Board

By JONATHAN WINFIELD.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—Thomas Jefferson was the first president of Washington's board of education. This fact was not generally known until recently, when former Superintendent A. T. Stuart of the local school department accidentally discovered "The Journal of the Proceedings of the Board of Trustees of the Eastern Free School for 1804," in which it is set forth that Mr. Jefferson was the head of the board. The book had been stored away with dozens of other books and pictures, in an almost forgotten closet of the Wallach school. Where they came from or how they got there no one knows.

The "Journal" now is securely hidden away in a dark compartment of the official safe of the board of education in the Franklin building. It's a curious old book which is allowed to see the light of day only upon rare occasions, and then only under the personal care of responsible officials.

This musty old record, brown with age and worn from much careless handling before its true value was known, is about thirteen inches long, eight inches wide, and an inch thick. It is bound in half calf, and the legible script and lofty language found between its sacred covers would shame many a college graduate of the present day, notwithstanding that the proceedings were written in days when a boy's education was usually thought completed when he could "read, write, and cipher."

THOMAS JEFFERSON

Robert Brent, chairman of

The first meeting of the board of trustees was held in the United States supreme court room in the capitol and the scope of the work outlined by this pioneer board was even more remarkable than some of the projects of modern days. Not only were primary and secondary schools to be established, but the great Washington's desire for a national university at the national capital was considered.

An interesting argument for the establishment of a college in Washington is contained in the following circular letter soliciting funds from citizens in all parts of the country:

Plan Never Materialized.

The parent who sends his son to Washington will find for him in his representative to congress a guardian and a friend who, during the greater part of the year will be his trustee, will observe his progress in his studies, superintend his morals, and perceive the real conditions and character of the seminary, and thus be able from time to time to satisfy parental inquiries and accusations.

But, nevertheless, this kindly cherished university has not yet been brought into existence.

At that time the "Tiber," an open creek flowing through the city separated the eastern from the western section. The new board provided for two schools—one to be situated east of the Capitol and within half a mile of it, and the other within half a mile of the president's house."

The eastern free school was located at the northeast corner of Third and D. streets, Northeast, and was a plain brick structure, fronting about twenty-five feet on D. street. Among old-time residents it was known as "McCormick's," and well might it be thus known for the Rev. Andrew T. McCormick was a member of the school board for many years and served as its president through nineteen successive years.

Hugh McCormick, the schoolmaster, neither spared the rod nor spared the child in his efforts to implant the "three R's" in the minds of the Capitol Hill youths and the records show that he was a stern disciplinarian, publicly expelling pupils of "bad character or incorrigible disposition."

The western school was located at the southwestern corner of Seventeenth and L. streets, but a few years later a committee obtained from President Monroe the use of Jefferson's old stable at Fourteenth and L. streets for the housing of the western school which then became popularly known as "Jefferson's stable." It became celebrated for the number of eminent men who received their first lessons there.

NAVAL MEDICAL SCHOOL

about fire drills, collision drills, fire and rescue parties, abandoning ship, what to do when there is a man overboard, how to conduct the sick bay, and so many other things that to mention them would be to make this catalog instead of a story.

There is a department which affords instruction in surgical matters, with particular stress upon operations and treatment of gunshot wounds, preparations for going into battle, and other conditions most likely to arise in the navy. It has been found that few regular medical schools give much training in eye diseases, and as good sight is one of the first essentials to good gunners, the school provides a liberal course of instruction in these matters.

Under conditions formerly existing in the navy a young doctor who had but lately walked out of his medical college with a diploma, might be designated to take an examination as a naval surgeon. The examination had comparatively little to do with determining his special fitness for naval work. If he passed he was put aboard a ship and told to shift for himself. The result was that he worked for years and had to acquire his knowledge of naval conditions by experience which was more costly to the patients and to the government than to himself. Today the naval medical school epitomizes the experience of generations of those who have gone down to the sea in ships, and gives it to each embryo naval surgeon before he enters upon his duties.

IT'S EASY TO CURE BALDNESS: A VACUUM LIGHT BATH DOES IT

From the San Francisco Chronicle.

"Have you taken a vacuum light bath? Probably not, because it's a new thing as yet, and not generally known about. They say that it does wonderful things, however, as it is guaranteed to cure baldness, too."

"It is a simple affair, just the combination of the heat rays of an incandescent lamp with a vacuum bell cup which is applied to various parts of the body. The action of the suction of the cup is two-fold. It draws impurities from the skin and also the blood to the surface. It has been used to heal wounds, with great success."

In addition to the stimulating effects of the suction, remarkably stimulating effects of heat are introduced. The small lamp dilates the blood vessels near the surface, allowing more blood to reach the affected parts and accelerate the blood stream. The heat rays find the skin extraordinarily receptive as the suction has opened the pores.

DESPERATE STRUGGLE WAGED ON PRECIPICE

GENEVA, March 15.—A terrible struggle on a mountain pass, near a precipice of 2000 feet, has taken place on the south slope of the Bernina range between an Italian officer and a private.

An Italian custom house patrol under the command of Lieutenant Rossi, who was visiting the Alpine posts in the Valdeline on the Swiss frontier when the officer had to reprimand a soldier named Celi. This man determined to have revenge.

When the patrol was away on their duty Celi attacked the officer on a lonely Alpine pass and attempted to throw him over the precipice. A long struggle followed, the men being of about equal strength and unarmored.

The officer, to save his life, bit through an artery in the wrist of his assailant, who collapsed, owing to the loss of blood. Soon afterwards the patrol arrived and carried Celi to a hospital in the valley.

The military court, which has now tried the case at Milan, took into consideration the sufferings and former good conduct of the soldier and above all the request of his officers to the prosecutors, and sentenced Celi to six months' imprisonment.

The mother tried to rescue her son after the girl, but the father, noting her back and crying "I will save her," sprang out into the darkness. The body of the father was afterwards found in a deep pool into which he had fallen and the girl was found dead on the rock meeting a fall in her arms.

A FAMOUS VINTNER IS BURIED IN WINE CELLAR

PARIS, March 15.—M. Léon Bignon, the owner of famous vineyards in the Beaune district, died a few days ago. He left a will in which he expressed the desire to be buried in one of the cellars of his picturesque chateau, which is several centuries old. The coffin was taken down in a big cave in the midst of wine barrels and wine presses and it was at the foot of a wine press that the funeral service took place. The coffin was buried in the cellar.

American Suffragettes Have But Little Sympathy With the Militant Methods Adopted by Their English Sisters

NEW YORK, March 15.—The effect of the American campaign for equal suffrage is compared with the English method of attaining the same end was shown in a talk contrast at suffrage headquarters here tonight.

"In America," said a prominent suffragette speaking on English and American methods of furthering the cause, "there have been no militant tactics, no brick throwing, no carbines, no iron bars, and the cause of equal rights has progressed until today there is, bright prospect of winning over the remainder of the states which still bar women from the polls."

In support of the contention that the quiet methods of campaigning in America were more effective than the militancy of England, a list of the suffrage battles committed in the latter country was drawn up, it follows:

Assaults on Ministers.

September 1, 1909—Prime minister buried at Lynx castle, Folkestone.

November 1, 1910—Mr. Churchill struck with dog-crip at Bristol.

November 21, 1911—Mr. Balfour mobbed. House of Lords paraded.

July 18, 1912—Hetherly thrown, carriage in which the prime minister and John Redmond, were driving through the streets of Dublin. Mr. McKenna assaulted at Cheylesmore.

July 26, 1912—Prime minister assaulted at Chester.

Raids on Parliament.

February 11, 1913—British women arrested after raid on house of commons.

June 26, 1913—Twenty-fourth women arrested.

June 26, 1913—Hundreds of British women arrested.

November 21, 1913—Two hundred and twenty-three women arrested.

Attacks on Property.

January 18, 1913—Prime minister's house railed.

March 2, 1912—Twenty thousand dollars' damage done by window-smashing in Westminster and west end.

July 12, 1912—Militantes found in McMillan's car at Liverpool.

July 13, 1912—Attack on the Number One Liverpool residence of Mrs. Lewis Harcourt.

July 18, 1912—Attack on Mr. Lloyd George's residence.

November 20, 1912—Afternoon attack on Mr. Lloyd George's residence.

January 20, 1913—Sixty-four women arrested and driven into Liverpool using the west end.

Raids on Parliament.

February 11, 1913—British women arrested after raid on house of commons.

February 11, 1913—Attempt to break up meeting of British suffragettes at Liverpool.

Meetings Stopped.

November 12, 1912—Mr. Lloyd George's speech stopped.

December 5, 1912—Breakup of Mr. Lloyd George's meeting, Liverpool.

November 20, 1913—Prime minister's house railed.

Assaults on Ministers.

March 2, 1912—Twenty thousand dollars' damage done by window-smashing in Westminster and west end.

Against this list of outrages on persons and property, the record of America's fight for equal rights is practically featureless. It was explained, however, that this does not mean that there are no militants in the ranks of the American suffragettes.

Several young American suffragettes have gone to England and have entered under the Pankhurst banner. They have taken their part in the violent suffragette campaign and have been in the little shop in jail. But the vast majority of the American suffragettes are in sympathy with the English suffragettes.

Hurt Own Cause.

The most stupid blunder of the English suffragette campaign, according to the American party of view, was the shooting of the home of Lloyd George. It was pointed out that Lloyd George was most favorably disposed toward equal suffrage, and furthermore that he was immensely popular. The attack, therefore, is believed to have had the effect of estranging a powerful advocate of the cause and at the same time of arousing a spirit of resentment among Englishmen generally, which may ride the women's movement forcing their reform through.

Great change in attitude, say American suffragettes for the cause has been evidenced in the day and will be further evidenced in the future by hostility on the part of the authorities.

They say that the "hunger strike" is decreasing in its effectiveness as a means of releasing the women from jail; that there is a strong disposition on the part of many Englishmen to make her escape from the scene of slaughter. She says a squad of rebels and a detachment of federal fought a fierce engagement with her vehicle in the center of the turmoil, but that she by some miracle escaped unharmed.

Looked the judge, and blackened the eye of a lawyer who attempted to stop him, while two others each received a blow on the nose.

There was a wild stampede from the court, and the president arose and wrapped himself in his robes as though uncertain whether he had a retreat. The infuriated Camorrist clambered up to the judicial bench with amazing agility and seized the assistant judge nearest to him, Cavaliere Vitali, by the throat and attempted to throttle him. Both fell to the floor in the desperate struggle. Barristers and policemen endeavored to separate them, but several minutes elapsed before the grip of the prisoner could be released and the man put in chains. The unfortunate judge, when released, was in a state of collapse.

CAMORRIST MAKES BOLD ATTACK IN COURTROOM

MILAN, March 15.—An attempt has been made by a Camorrist prisoner to strangle a judge at the Naples criminal court. Two members of the Neapolitan Camorra, Spalones and Guadagni, were found guilty of theft and were each sentenced to 16 months' imprisonment.

Immediately sentence was pronounced, the prisoner Guadagni, a man of Hebrew origin, told the two members who were on guard and escaped from the iron cage in which he was confined. He dashed out and sought the judge, and blackened the eye of a lawyer who attempted to stop him, while two others each received a blow on the nose.

LACK OF FUNDS IS CAUSING ANXIETY

Germany May Resort to Plan of Income Tax to Wipe Out Deficit

RICH MEN OPPOSE SCHEME

Herr Wermuth Proposed
Method of Taxation, but Lost Cabinet Position

By FREDERICK WERNER

FRANKLIN March 15—Herr Wermuth, chafing master of the art of war, has every reason to feel satisfied at present to go on to carry through the new army bill and provide money to meet the enormous increase in expense the government will undoubtedly have to add to the plan which is to be voted and will strengthen our military power.

Until a few days ago Herr Wermuth was the all-powerful minister of war of the empire. He fell because he insisted that part of the burden of the new taxation to meet the new naval and military increase should be paid by those who inherited large fortunes and those who had large incomes. In other words he urged the necessity of an inheritance and income tax but his suggestion aroused the furious indignation of the conservative parties, the millionaires and the large estate owners who claimed that it was an insult on the part of the minister of finance to propose that citizens who already had such great responsibilities as the possession of wealth carries with it should carry their special part of the increased burden of taxes.

Causes Anxiety.

At present the memory of the downfall of Herr Wermuth causes considerable anxiety. It is an indisputable fact that even as matters stand at present there will be an imperial annual deficit of $25,000,000 during the next four or five years. If the new military bill is passed this annual deficit will be at least $75,000,000. Where is the money to come from? Those who have to pay cannot do so, as they have already been stripped to the shirt and those who are able to pay refuse to do so.

This is the present situation in a nutshell. The question is now whether it will be thought necessary to bring forward the hated inheritance and graduated income tax which Herr Wermuth demanded more than a year ago or whether the government will attempt to continue the selfish policy which allows those who possess fortunes and estates to escape payment of taxes while those who have next to nothing must be robbed of the little they still possess.

There is no doubt but that the new military demands will be accepted but the question of how the millions are to be raised will bring about a bitter struggle in which the imperial chancellor, Herr von Bethmann-Hollweg, will have to bear the brunt of the battle.

Resort to Jesuit Order.

In order to win new allies the chancellor caused the reichstag to repeal the old law against the Jesuits, but he did not quite succeed for the law will still remain in force as is shown first.

Grand Duchess Olga of Russia

ST. PETERSBURG, March 15—Although Grand Duchess Olga is but 17 years old she has won a battle with her august parents the czar and czarina which promises to revolutionize the Russian court.

It is said that this self-willed little lady has finally triumphed in her struggle to be the promised bride of her cousin, Grand Duke Dmitri Pavlovitch, against the prolonged and bitter opposition of her mother.

Dmitri is now an exile in Paris having been banished from St. Petersburg after a carousal at home. He is the son of the czar's uncle, Grand Duke Paul, the former leader of the gayest, wildest set in St. Petersburg and whose escapades furnished the scandal mongers of Europe their choicest stories for 25 years.

To please the czarina tried to end her court of her husband's weird relative but she was hampered by the czar's mother who abetted the grand duke and laughed at the reforms of society. The czarina finally triumphed however and Paul was banished.

Now it is asserted that he will return to St. Petersburg when his son marries the czar's daughter.

MAY SHOOT AT AEROPLANES

Report of Dirigible Seen in Flight Proves Peculiar Coincidence

By PHILLIP EVERETT

LONDON March 15—Some wily orator immediately after the recent suffrage outrages suggested that Miss Pankhurst and her lieutenants ought to be made honorary members of the Women's Antisuffrage League in consideration of their distinguished services to that body. On the same principle I think Count Zeppelin, General Parcasse and a few other distinguished German aerial inventors ought surely to be made honorary members of the British Army and Navy clubs, general British Jingo associations and in addition be given a large block of preferred shares in the Daily Express and other sensational newspapers for not only have these Germans done the big navvies and the Tory party invaluable services but they have also acted as stimulants to the imagination of the said part of the press and furnished copy for war scares without number.

Recently they were served as an appetizer to our house of commons when The Right to Shoot Act was read before the lords and commons airship visiting these islands unless by invitation. If it does not go so far as to be shot at and perhaps though this is less likely hit by our excellent British marksmen.

Continue Flights

That act was introduced some time ago and we already imagined the Germans turning pale with fear and in powerless fear relinquishing their flights over here. But did they do so? Not a bit of it and that shows how deadly is their hatred of England and what dangerous enemies they are. Ever since the Right to Shoot Act was proposed they have been coming over here thicker than ever and it is not more than a week ago that in one of the Daily Graphics' realistic photographs counted I think fifteen of these dreadful German dirigible aerial monsters on one single page, their powerful searchlights penetrating our foggy atmosphere.

The papers interested in these nightmares have been full of the most alarming reports and though some of these may have been invented by ambitious space writers I will name one which was substantiated in the most positive manner.

On Friday night February 21 the London papers reported an enormous airship was seen passing swiftly across the dignified but harmless English market town of Selby which deals in vegetables and not in canards by the way, disappearing in a westerly direction. Some people thought they heard voices in the air singing "Wacht am Rhein" and it is also said that a mysterious barrel of sauerkraut was found near the vegetable market but these are of course mere inessential details.

Ship Was Seen.

And now for the corroboration. The airship was seen flying over Selby on Friday night February 21. According to reports in German papers the German military airship Zeppelin LZ 1 on Saturday night February 22 effected a flight over Wurzburg, Aschaffenburg and other German towns the whole flight lasting 18 hours.

The London paper serving this sensational dish of news modestly calls this an "extraordinary coincidence" but where would you find a British jury not willing to submit the verdict that here is conclusive evidence of a secret visit of a German dirigible to England?

Of course anyone must admire the more dramatic the moderation of the paper which merely designates that an "extraordinary coincidence" but there is a coincidence more extraordinary still and that is that the same should have turned up again just when the British naval estimates are due and when any cutting down of these would be so detrimental to so many interests. Is it not obvious on the face of it that Zeppelin is worthy of an honorary membership in the navy club of his own ship to speed up the British shipbuilding program?

Another coincidence! In Germany we are told there are 22 airships owned by private people and it is alleged that eight of these are capable of crossing the North sea and returning.

Is it not possible that some people, say, remotely interested in warship construction have, by coincidence arranged a pleasure trip just at this time?

Among the forward movements in China devised by the new national church is a Christian Literature society. The Rev. A. G. Gilman, Episcopal missionary at Chongsha, was unanimously chosen as the first secretary.

Even the German Socialists will not oppose the increased military expenditure, but they will certainly insist that the increased burden must be carried by the broadest shoulders. They have already declared, of course, with their usual brazen that they will not give a single man or a single penny to any Prussian army, but this not to be taken seriously. In the end they will submit though it is more than likely that the bills will not be passed without a dissolution of the reichstag.

Dissolution or no dissolution however in the end the kaiser will win.

GREAT DOCK TO BE BUILT IN LONDON

Part of Scheme to Become Greatest Commercial Port in the World

LONDON March 15—One of the ambitions of London is that of becoming indisputably the greatest commercial seaport in the world and a step in this direction the enormous sum of $15,000,000 is shortly to be spent on enlarging the Royal Albert dock.

Men are already employed on excavation operations but it will be four years before the work is completed. The dock will be known as the South Albert dock, and it is designed to provide for large modern steamships, and to relieve the congestion of shipping at the Royal Albert. It will have an area of 65 acres, and the dry dock, which is the first part of the scheme to be taken in hand, will be 550 feet in length, capable of extension to 800 feet, with a width of 100 feet.

The owners of all great docks understand have been called upon in recent years to expend vast sums of money in modernizing their equipment. Docks have to be reconstructed to accommodate the largest ship afloat. If a port expects to receive a share of the world's ocean traffic the port authorities' scheme will eventually involve an outlay of $70,000,000, but it will be carried out piecemeal, and the most urgent work will be put in hand

Very Popular in France
Spends Much Time at His

By GEORGE DUFRESNE.

PARIS March 15—We are more and more interested with our new president. What is an American would call a real blunder and France has been longing for a blunder in the presidential chair ever since the new spirit of energy and patriotism invaded this country. On two former presidents, M. Loubet and M. Fallier, two born highly respected and dignified men but they were both past the age of a true manhood and while nobody could find faults with them under the old spirit of laissez faire, they would have been out of place as representatives of our rejuvenated and steaming France when needed an executive of the caliber of President Roosevelt's stamp and which has got just what it wanted in M. Poincare.

His very first message to the senate and chamber struck the very tone the country was waiting to hear and all France went wild with delight at the idea that the new president does not afraid to take the initiative to remain a more figurehead. Since the days of M. Wilson France has not had a president who is so boldly asserted that the chief executive of the country should be the real leader of the government, and while our present relations are rather dumb-founded by suddenly finding a man at the helm of state who is inclined to make himself the boss of the show for the next seven years no one except us then to make any serious trouble because they feel that the whole people stand behind the president, whose tact and genius is not doubted by anyone.

Having recovered, Mlle Dutourne is turned to France and made a number of flights on a Farman biplane. Her best performance in 1910 was to be on the last day of the year December 31 when she won the Coupe Feminina. It was also a test as to who could support the biting cold longer. Mlle Dutourne who flew for three hours or the timorous who with their usual male vanity had imagined that it would all be over in five minutes. Major Kellie gives an account of that day's adventure.

Mlle Dutourne afterwards made daring flights in Spain, Italy, Belgium and Holland. She won the cup for speed given by the king of Italy and in America she won prizes for duration and for altitude records. Last December she won for the second time the Feminina up to a flight of 150 miles.

Lady Mary Sackville

LONDON March 15—Lady Sackville, the mother of the beautiful Lady Mary Sackville, is again to appear in the law courts in a case which promises to be sensational.

She was a Sackville-West herself and daughter of the late Lord Sackville. She married her father's nephew, Lord Sackville-West now Lord Sackville in 1890. They have had one child, Lady Victoria Mary who was born in 1892 and it is for her sake that Lady Sackville is a determined litigant.

Her present legal fight is to protect the fortune left her by the late Sir John Murray Scott, one of the trustees of the famous Wallace collection. Sir John died suddenly in August of last year and a draft of a will to his wife was found among his papers leaving £15,000 to be divided between Lady Sackville and Justice Bargrave Dean by Lady Sackville.

It is now alleged that there is another codicil in existence which releases all bequests to Lady Sackville. The relatives of Sir John Murray Scott intend to fight the case to a finish. They allege that certain facts concerning Lady Sackville came to light during his lifetime and that this caused him to make his bequest and that this is now to be fought out in the law courts.

We must finish once and for all with these women who are so ready to cause him to make his bequest and they further do this that she is to be paid the money.

Onion Seller to Die for Murder of Rival

PARIS March 15—At the Seine assizes, where the jury has often been reproached for its leniency, sentence of death has been passed on Mme. Parrer, a Spanish woman, for the murder of a rival onion seller named Mme. Dolores Ruiz. The two women quarreled and Mme. Parrer yielded for her rival in the street and killed her with a revolver. The accused, although of Spanish origin, had lived in London and gave her evidence in English. The public prosecutor declared.

We must finish once and for all with these women who are so ready to cause him to make his bequest and they further do this that she is to be paid the money.

BOY SCOUT OFFICIAL WITH BROKEN NECK REGAINS HEALTH

Always Was Cheerful—H. E. Shaffer, Scout Commissioner of the Boy Scouts of America for Porto Rico, Is Getting Rapidly Better in Newark Hospital: Three Vertebrae Were Fractured

NEW YORK, MARCH 15.—A young boy told them he was expected to get better or if he did not he could always be a good scout. Shaffer, a young man automobile racing about 12 weeks ago last Rutherford, New Jersey. He was thrown out of his machine and landed on his back. He was taken to the home of his sister and from there removed to the Home for crippled children where he could be under the special care of a prominent surgeon. At first his case seemed hopeless but Shaffer was cheerful and smiling at all times. He even insisted on taking care of part of his business such as dictating letters. Shaffer soon will go back to Porto Rico to take up his work again. When he arrives there he will be joyously greeted by hundreds of boy scouts whom he had gathered into troops. The scouts were greatly moved by their leader's devotion and thought that never again would see him.

Shaffer's optimism in his suffering and in the prospect for a time that he was permanently injured won the admiration of the officials of the Boy Scouts of America. They have been friends of his for many months. Shaffer's friends were received at national headquarters. Shaffer greeted all his visitors cheerfully.

Paris Milliners
and Dressmakers
Boycott Modelers

PARIS, March 15. Milliners and dressmakers in the Rue de la Paix are excited. It is not an unusual psychological state for them, but the degree of excitement seems to have reached a very high point. They will for the future refuse to deliver purchased models except in the towns abroad for which they were secured. The resolution has not been taken by a few individuals, but by the whole guard of the Rue de la Paix. Forgetting their trade rivalry, they combined and voted the drastic measure. Hitherto, when foreign buyers purchased models, they were supplied on the spot. But the complaint is that many of them had tarried in Paris and allowed Parisian firms who have only a common trade and not an artistic conception of millinery and dressmaking to copy these models and to sell them at a higher price.

"We could stand this no longer," said the director of one of the artistic houses of the Rue de la Paix. "It is painful for us, the creators of fashion, to see our works paraded by bad copies as it is for a painter to see his picture reproduced by clumsy imitators. We attack no one in particular, but we do not want to work for the common trade, which degrades and distorts our creations. Things had gone so far that 'private' exhibits of our latest models were held in some of the leading hotels in Paris, to which other purchasers were invited, and they could thus at small expense copy the signed models of the great dressmakers. We had to put a stop to it."

The only way, it seems, was not to deliver models here in Paris but to send them on to New York, Chicago or St. Petersburg to be delivered there by accredited agents, where they will not be such an easy prey to the artistic piracy of Paris.

"Consul" Aids Man
in Distress, Only to Take His Roll

By GEORGE DUFRESNE.

PARIS, March 15.—A Parisian druggist having accumulated considerable competency and sold his business advantageously, invited several friends to dinner at a restaurant to celebrate his newfound freedom. The food was good and the wine flowed freely, until when the bill came to be presented all the diners were in a state of exaltation. The druggist found himself unable to agree with the manager on the subject of a bill. Things had reached a crisis when a stranger at the next table intervened and indignantly protested against the way the druggist had been overcharged.

"I am the consul for Guatemala," he said, "and I have observed the number of bottles the gentlemen has had served. It is half the number you have charged against him."

This dignified witness turned the scales in favor of the druggist, who left the restaurant arm-in-arm with his new friend.

They met again, and at a memorable dinner the consul promised to procure invitations for the retired tradesman and his wife to government balls and embassy functions. The consul "Really does" put bad stomachs in order—really does" overcome indigestion, dyspepsia, gas, heartburn and sourness in five minutes—that just makes Pape's Diapepsin the largest selling stomach regulator in the world. If what you eat ferments into stubborn lumps, you beth gas and eructate sour, undigested food and acid, head is dizzy and aches, breath foul, tongue coated, your insides filled with bile and indigestible waste, remember the moment Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. It's truly astonishing, almost marvelous, and the joy is its harmlessness.

A large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin will give you a hundred dollars' worth of satisfaction or your druggist hands you your money back.

It's worth its weight in gold to men and women who can't get their stomachs regulated. It belongs in your home—should always be kept handy in case of a sick, sour, upset stomach during the day or at night. It's the quickest, surest and most harmless stomach doctor in the world. Adv.

was called hurriedly away on official business before the end of the dinner. When the druggist came to settle the bill he found that his pocketbook, with $1,500 had gone with the self-styled consul.

The druggist ran to the Guineamaid consulate and demanded to see the real consul. It being after office hours he was refused admittance. He would not have been so violent if he had not just dined, but, anyway the police were called, and his extraordinary accusations against the consul, in addition to his wild behavior, impressed them that they took him at once to a lunatic asylum.

The druggist has had considerable difficulty in procuring his release.

PERFECTS ORGANIZATION TO SYSTEMATIZE WORK

LONDON, March 15.—Marshall Bruce-Williams is a man whose aim in life is to reduce everything to a system. Chaos distresses him, and he sees in the civilization of today nothing but a vast tangle of uncharted facts. To remedy this he founded the Organization society, which, as he explained recently to party that gathered in the Savoy restaurant, is a non-commercial undertaking to reduce everything to hard, cold fact and figures. The insurance act, for instance, which involves 55,000 words of explanation, is made by the organization society into a chart of simple words that can be hung on the wall.

"Our aim," said he, "is to establish a college to train lecturers to proclaim the science of organization and to advocate the application of its principles."

"We shall design simple methods of teaching children to think clearly—for that is the aim of life today. We want to produce scientifically organized minds."

HEAVY HITTERS AND FAST FIELDERS ON TIGER SQUAD

Team Promises to Be Contender for Pennant--Pitching Staff Speedy

Out Colorado college way those who have been watching the antics of the baseball candidates are beginning already to talk about a slugging, fast fielding, championship team. Prospects for one of the hardest hitting ball clubs that has ever worn the Black and Gold are excellent and some of the players on the team are going to have a hard time to get the places they have held for one or more years.

The best prospects are in the pitching line and never before have the Tigers had three batters who can shoot 'em across with the terrific speed that is being shown on Washburn field these nights. All of the pitchers are husky men with considerable experience and the other Colorado teams are going to be surprised.

John Jackson, the Rocky Ford phenom, has a kit of fast deceivers, a nice assortment of pace changes and above all is showing good control. Jackson has been working hard every night and looks good.

Claybaugh, who is a battery by himself, being a good catcher, is the speediest thrower out for the team. His shots, so far, have baffled the majority of the Tiger catching candidates so speedily do they travel.

Davis, the Monte Vista lad, is also a pitcher who will probably work some this season. Davis is a track man of ability, being out for the high jump, pole vault and the discus throw. He holds the state interscholastic high jump record at this time. Being in good condition, it is believed that he will be able to handle both branches of sport. All three pitchers are good sticklers, a trait that in past years has been noticeable for its absence.

New Infielders Speedy.

Three new men are working like beavers for infield jobs and may land them if they continue their good showing. Culp, a Rocky Ford teammate of Jackson, and a southpaw, first baseman, is hard after that place. He is a free batter, never moves from the plate and swings with a healthy motion that sends the ball shooting. Over at third base, Frank Evans, last year's Terror star, is gobbling up all that comes his way and is a likely man for that difficult bug. The Tigers have not had a class A third-sacker for years and it seems as though he will probably fill the bill.

"Pink" Lewis, former Cutler infielder, and Whitney, a new man, are after the shortstopping place. Both are fast fielders and while not as steady as Captain "Ebbie" Jackson are good men. Jackson, whose place in the infield is certain, may play on second. However, it will take this week's work to decide.

In the outfield the veterans are going to have some merry work to get jobs. Bud Wall, a valuable man on any college team, who held down the first sack last season, is as good an outfielder as an infielder and may finally land in one of the gardens. Moberg, Thornell and Hughes, the veterans, are after positions and the candidate list is large.

Catcher Undecided.

The catcher of the Tiger team is undecided and there is a pretty fight for the place. Claybaugh, although a pitcher, is also a catcher and is working hard. Baker, former Cutler star, is doing most of the heavy work these days, while Cheese and Howland are out for the receivership.

Couch Rothgeb has yet to place his O. K. brand on the entire team. Last week there was little constructive work, a gentle warming up of fielders being supplemented by harder battery work. This week the molding process will be in effect but it is probable that most of the positions will not be decided until after spring vacation, which ends March 21. Spring vacation will probably see several practice games.

This week there will probably be a practice game with the Terrors who have been working hard and who are in fairly good shape. The first Tiger game will be on April 5, with the Mines.

Nice Fight Promised.

The state baseball situation promises to be lively interest this spring. Up at Colorado university the team hopes are not as brilliant as last year, although there are four or five pitch-

K. O. BROWN AND BUD ANDERSON DRAW IN A TERRIFIC BATTLE

LOS ANGELES, March 15.—In one of the fiercest lightweight fights ever seen in the Vernon arena, Bud Anderson of Vancouver and Knockout Brown of New York battled to a draw this afternoon. Both boys took great punishment. In the eleventh and twelfth rounds Anderson had Brown almost out, but in the twentieth the New Yorker had his opponent in the same condition, the bell saving Anderson from a possible knockout.

While Knockout Brown was the aggressor throughout, it was only his remarkable recuperative powers and wonderful gameness that won him a draw in the last minute of the battle. Anderson had his boxer in the field, it is certain, may play on second. However, it will take this week's work to decide.

In the outfield the veterans are going to have some merry work to get jobs. Bud Wall, a valuable man on any college team, who held down the first sack last season, is as good an outfielder as an infielder and may finally land in one of the gardens.

Moberg, Thornell and Hughes, the veterans, are after positions and the ing unknowns lined up. Denver and the Mines will probably be the strongest contenders with the Tigers for the title this spring. Both teams have a large number of veterans.

Kelly Breaks 120-Yard Hurdles in 15 Seconds Flat

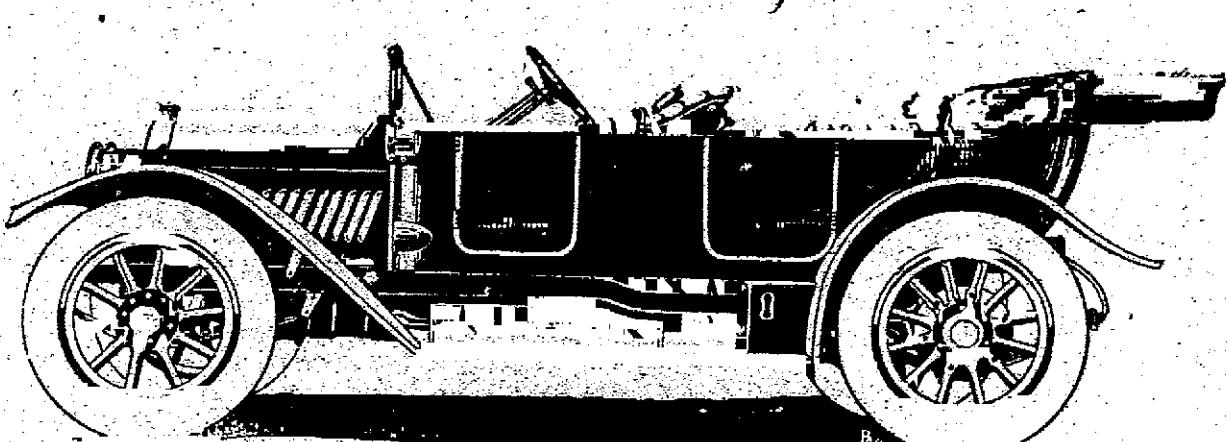

LOS ANGELES, March 15.—Fred Kelly, Olympic champion, won his 120-yard high hurdle event in the world's record time of 15 seconds flat today at the track meet contested by the University of Southern California and Stanford University. Three watchers on the side lines made his time faster than that given out by the official timer, catching it at 14.45 seconds. Kelly was on the University of Southern California team, which won 62 points from Stanford.

Athletics Best Bet Because of Infield

By W. J. MACBETH.

HAMILTON, Ontario, March 16.—Connie Mack of the Athletics is the only major league manager who has been able to plunge into spring training with no worry over his men's defense. Philadelphia's effort is as close to perfection as anything that has been flashed across the professional baseball span. Even Merkle is a bit uncertain as to the final array of the champion Giants while a couple of the Red Sox infielders are questionable quantities.

McGravey's outfit did not just shut him last season, despite the runaway race he made in the National League. The team staggered through the campaign well enough but in the celebrated world's series the red test a few things transpired that set the fans to thinking: why not in the world's series, and indeed in the final stages of the spring both Merkle and Fletcher fell down badly. Merkle played very erratically the last six weeks and then gummed the series by failing to try for an easy pop foul from Tris Speaker in the eighth and concluding contest in the ninth annual classic.

McGraw Gives New Trials.

McGraw may be forced to employ both these men through lack of better material. It is not likely that he will judge them by world's series performances. Had he been a manager of this stamp Jack Murray would have been excused after his dismal failure in the 1911 clash with the Athletics. McGraw braved public sentiment, clung to Murray and gave this sterling gardener a chance to vindicate his ability. McGraw also stuck by Merkle after that incident of 1903 when failure to touch second base cost New York a pennant. That Merkle is a good fellow, there is no denying; he proved it by braving the wrath of the multitudes and the criticism of the scribes. He may come back this year as Murray did last and prove McGraw's judgment the most sound after all.

It must be confessed, however, that Merkle slumped so perceptibly during the closing stages of the last campaign that the Little Napoleon is thinking seriously about the question. McGraw has been schooling his great Indian recruit, Jim Thorpe, for first base duty. He may not be as apprehensive of Merkle but it is a certainty that he appears none too certain of him. Fletcher, too, will have to hustle as he never hustled before to hold the shortstop position safe from Tiff Shafer's clutches. McGraw himself says that Fletcher might never have gained a regular berth in 1912 but for the death of Shafer's mother which called that sterling performer away at a time when he was playing in superb form.

Hed Sox Infield Weakness.

The infield of the Boston Red Sox was all that could be desired in '12 but it is questionable if it can hold together another year. Terpke was carried along by Heine Wagner, who had his best major league season.

ATHLETES DIE YOUNG, IS CLAIM OF MEDICAL PAPER

The author of an article in the Journal of the American Medical Association, which charges that American college athletes die young because of the training system followed, has started a lively debate on the merits of the training methods employed in the prominent colleges in this country. The coaches and trainers who have been priding themselves on the development of a system that enabled them to turn out the best athletes in the world have come right back in defense of their methods in an effort to ward off the blow that was aimed at the very root of the system that has made America great in athletic competitions.

The article states that men who make the great records seldom live beyond middle age; that sprinters frequently die of heart failure before they are 30. "Instead of building up the body, the prevailing methods of training tend to break it down," the article reads. "Europeans have a far happier expression for the employment of their bodily activities in the word 'sport,' which implies the combination of a healthy spirit with what we call exercise. Such an attitude is almost unknown here. Instead, there exists a form of overdoing that finds its chief reward in the applause of the multitude and later physical trouble." Athletes have long been under the influence of so-called 'trainers,' frequently men of keen judgment and technical skill, but without any systematic acquaintance with physical truths. The best intellectual feature of rival contests—the encouragement for each man to put forth the best that is in him and to exercise his own ingenuity in the development and maintenance of an efficient, superior body—is suppressed by the advent of that guardian saint, the trainer?

Replying to the statement, Dr. R. Tait McKenzie, one of the most noted men in the world on physical development, said:

"I have statistics of the men who have won the 'V' at Yale, the oarsmen at Harvard for many years, the track and field men of Oxford and Cambridge, many club runners, jumpers and vaulters, and they prove past all doubt that the athlete lives longer than the average man. Insurance companies, the closest tabulators of facts, assert that the athlete outlives the average man. Now and then a sprinter dies at 30 from heart trouble, but he would probably have died at 25 had he not taken up athletics. I am firmly in favor of athletics as a prolonger of life, health and manhood, and a general benefit to all communities."

Editorial Note: The following is a list of some of the more interesting and important stories of the day.

McGraw was the best bet because of his defense. The other words on the list are the following:

Connie Mack of the Athletics is the only major league manager who has been able to plunge into spring training with no worry over his men's defense.

Philadelphia's effort is as close to perfection as anything that has been flashed across the professional baseball span.

Even Merkle is a bit uncertain as to the final array of the champion Giants while a couple of the Red Sox infielders are questionable quantities.

McGraw may be forced to employ both these men through lack of better material. It is not likely that he will judge them by world's series performances.

Had he been a manager of this stamp Jack Murray would have been excused after his dismal failure in the 1911 clash with the Athletics.

McGraw braved public sentiment, clung to Murray and gave this sterling gardener a chance to vindicate his ability.

Heine Wagner, who had his best major league season.

BOY SCOUT DEPARTMENT

BOY SCOUT OFFICIAL WITH BROKEN NECK REGAINS HEALTH

Always Was Cheerful—H. E. Shaffer, Scout Commissioner of the Boy Scouts of America for Porto Rico, Is Getting Rapidly Better in Newark Hospital: Three Vertebrae Were Fractured

NEW YORK, March 15.—(UPI)—That was the motto which H. E. Shaffer, general commissioner of the Boy Scouts of America for Porto Rico, has kept in mind constantly for three months as he lay in the hospital in Newark, New Jersey, with a broken neck. He has been cheerful, and has treated his friends' sentiments with a frankness that has caused him to be called a "bad boy." After nine weeks of doubt he is almost as he was when he came from the hospital, feeling fine again. His cheerfulness has been rewarded.

Though three of the cervical vertebrae were fractured and Shaffer could not hold up his head after the accident, expert surgical treatment has resulted in the knitting of the fractured bones so that Shaffer will soon be as well and as strong as ever. For three months he has been in the Home for crippled children in Newark, with his head strapped back so that he could not move.

Shaffer's grandson, in his suffering and in the prospect for a time that he was permanently injured, won the admiration of the officials of the Boy Scouts of America. They have been friends of his for many months.

Shaffer, formerly, was connected with national headquarters. Shaffer, though still his visitors, cheerfully is 5 feet 6 inches in height. He is described as having brown hair, small gray eyes, and prominent nose. The end of his little finger on his left hand is gone. When he left home he wore a gray and black striped suit, gray cotton flannel shirt, gray cap, mixed brown overcoat, and patent leather shoes.

ALASKA BOY
SCOUTS HAVE CAMP
NEAR GLACIERS

An Interesting Glimpse of Scouting in Alaska Is Furnished by the Rev. Harry P. Corser of Wrangell, Who Tells of a Camping Expedition With His Scouts

Scouting among glaciers and icebergs is one of the summer pastimes of the Boy Scouts of America in Alaska. There is a troop of 20 scouts in Wrangell under the Rev. Harry P. Corser, pastor of St. Philip's church. He took the boys on a camping expedition last summer near the Kugluk glacier. He found the expedition not only an inspiration to himself but a source of fun and a stimulus to the boys.

Scoutmaster Corser says that the boy problem comes to the missionaries as well as to other preachers, and upon the way in which the missionary preaches the boys never forget the success of his work. "We have been asked to tell," he writes, "what we are doing for our boys in Wrangell. Our answer is, we have introduced the boy scouts, and we find them very successful. Many boys literally became morally and intellectually because nothing has been furnished them to do in their time of recreation. The boy scout movement corrects this by giving the boy an interest and an occupation. When we have our sports we insist that every boy shall take his place in the games. No one is allowed simply to look on."

"One of the great rewards for faithful service on the part of the boys is the annual camping trip. The last one we had was very successful. It was a fine summer day when we started. The use of a large gas boat was donated by the manager of one of our packing companies, and it was a very lot of boys that started on a trip to Kugluk glacier, 30 miles from town. We camped that night near the foot of the glacier."

"For scenery the place was all that could be desired. At the foot of the glacier is a large lake surrounded by mountains, perhaps 2,000 feet high, their sides being so steep that climbing them was out of the question. In the lake were icebergs as big as large-sized houses. Back beyond the glacier were high peaks looking in the distance like some of the old German castles. Most brilliant flowers grew right up at the edge of the ice and the snow."

"But some may say, 'What does all this have to do with missionary work?' It looks simply like having a good time. We did have a fine time, but it was something a great deal more than that. Every Sunday school is troubled more or less with the 'bad boy' class. Too frequently these bad boys have been cast aside as hopeless. On an excursion like this boys begin to ask questions, and you will be surprised to find that behind each so-called bad boy, there is a good-sized doubt. You have a chance to explain, and he is now better satisfied with himself and his church; what was, or might have been, the bad boy's class becomes the missionary's best helper."

As a result two of our scouts, not from church families, have asked to be made ready for confirmation, and four of them have asked to be enrolled as members of a junior chapter of the brotherhood of St. Andrew. Nearly all of our boys are quite regular attendants of our church services. When we returned from our excursion the boys were more enthusiastic, and the missionary himself felt so refreshed that he would recommend to any clergyman an excursion with the boys of his church as a cure for that exhausted feeling which comes at times to the best of us."

MILITARY DRILLS FORBIDDEN THE BOY SCOUTS OF AMERICA

A further move to eliminate militarism from the Boy Scouts of America was taken at the third annual meeting. An order was issued to scoutmasters directing them to eliminate military methods and ideas and to keep only such drills as are needed to teach the boys to move promptly and in an orderly manner from one place to another. These drills should not be used in any way as dummy muskets. The leaders of the Boy Scouts of America wish to encourage the boys in peace scouting.

GREETINGS FROM HUNGARIAN BOY SCOUTS

Greetings to the Boy Scouts of America from the Hungarian Boy Scouts have been sent by E. J. Bing, general secretary and scoutmaster of that organization in Budapest, Hungary. "I trust," he writes, "that the Boy Scouts of America and the Hungarian Boy Scouts will always be linked together by the firm band of sincere friendship. We foster the same feelings regarding this international friendship as you."

Paris Milliners and Dressmakers Boycott Modelers

PARIS, March 13.—Milliners and dressmakers in the Rue de la Paix are excited. It is not an unusual psychological state for them, but the degree of excitement seems to have reached a very high point. They will for the future refuse to deliver purchased models except in the towns abroad for which they were secured. The restriction has not been taken by a few individuals, but by the whole guild in the Rue de la Paix. Forgetting their trade rivalry, they combined and voted the drastic measure. Hitherto, when foreign buyers purchased models, they were supplied on the spot. But the complaint is that many of them had arrived in Paris and allowed Parisian firms who have only a commercial and not an artistic conception of millinery and dressmaking, to copy those models and to sell them at a "higher" price.

"We could stand this no longer," said the dressress of one of the artistic houses of the Rue de la Paix. "It is as painful for us, the creators of fashion, to see our works paraded by bad copies as it is for a painter to see his picture reproduced by clumsy imitators. We attack no one in particular, but we do not want to work for the common trade, which degrades and disfigures our creations. Things had gone so far that private exhibits of our latest models were held in some of the leading hotels in Paris, to which other purchasers were invited, and they could thus at small expense copy the signed models of the great designers. We had to put a stop to it."

The only way, it seems, was to deliver models here in Paris, let them be sent on to New York, Chicago or St. Petersburg to be delivered there by accredited agents, where they will not be such an easy prey to the artful piracy of Paris. The druggist ran to the Guatemalan consul and demanded to see the real consul. It being after office hours he was refused admittance. He would not have been so violent if he had but just dined; but, anyway, the police were called, and his extraordinary accusations against the consul, in addition to his wild behavior, so impressed them that they took him at once to the lunatic asylum.

The druggist has had considerable difficulty in procuring his release.

PERFECTS ORGANIZATION TO SYSTEMATIZE WORK

By GEORGE DUFRESNE.

PARIS, March 15.—A Parisian druggist having accumulated a considerable competency and sold his business advantageously, invited several friends to dinner at a restaurant to celebrate his newfound freedom. The food was good, and the wine flowed freely, until when the bill came to be presented all the diners were in a state of exaltation. The druggist found himself unable to agree with the manager on the subject of a bill. Things had reached a crisis when a stranger at the next table intervened and indignantly protested against the way the druggist had been overcharged.

"I am the consul for Guatemala," he said, "and I have observed the number of bottles the gentlemen has had served. It is half the number you have charged against him."

This dignified witness turned the scales in favor of the druggist, who in the restaurant arm-in-arm with his new friend.

They met again, and at a memorandum dinner the consul promised to procure invitations for the retired tradesman and his wife to government balls and embassy functions. The consul

LONDON, March 15.—Marshall Bruce Williams is a man whose aim in life is to reduce everything to a system. Chaos distresses him, and he sees in the civilization of today nothing but a vast tangle of uncharted paths.

To remedy this he founded the Organization society, which, as he explained recently to a party that gathered in the Savoy restaurant, is a non-commercial undertaking to reduce everything to hard, cold fact and figures. The insurance act, for instance, which involves 55,000 words of explanation, is made by the organization society into a chart of simple words that can be hung on the wall.

"Our aim," said he, "is to establish a college to train lecturers to proclaim the science of organization and to advocate the application of its principles."

"We shall design simple methods of teaching children to think clearly—for that is the aim of life today. We want to produce, scientifically organized minds."
